Niblack, of U. S. Squadron, to Keep Italians and Jugo-Slavs in Order

By International News Service.

Washington, March 8.—An inter-allied force has been placed at the disposal of Admiral Niblack, commanding American naval forces on the Adriatic, with instructions that he take the steps necessary to prevent a repetition of the clash between Jugo-Slavs and Italians at Spalato, it was revealed in a dispatche to the Italian embassy from Paris this afternoon.

Following the clash, the cable states, the International committee of admirals issued the following proclamation:

"The International committee of admirals for the application of the clauses of the armistice in the Adriatic, has taken cognizance of the fact that order and safety do not exist in the city of Spalato. The officers belonging to one of the Allied nations have been molested.

"The committee, through Admiral Niblack, delegate of the United States charged with the naval command of that zone, informs the local authorities, both civil and military, that the acts committed constitute a violation of the terms of the armistice and that a repetition will be prevented by force of arms.

FIVE BOYS HELD FOR $63,000 ROBBERY

By International News Service.

New York, March 8.—Five boys whose ages range from sixteen to twenty years are under arrest here today following the daring attack yesterday in the Wall street district on a bank messenger who was blackjacked and robbed of securities valued at $63,000.

Theodore Mignone, sixteen, the youngest boy of the five, is said to have confessed that he blackjacked Milton Strohm, messenger for L. N. Prince & Co., and robbed him of the securities, which included $49,000 in Liberty bonds, certified checks to the value of $14,000 and other valuable stocks.

Gustave Mignone, twenty, and Anthony, eighteen, brothers of the boy, who admittedly "put it over alone," are under arrest with him. The other two boys are Lester Osterlag, seventeen, and Edward Andreas, twenty.

COUNSEL BATTLE TO FREE RICH MISS MORTIMER

Miss Edith Mortimer, wealthy society girl of Wheatley Hills, L. I., now on trial on manslaughter charge in auto tragedy. She is accused of running down and killing two workmen.

New York, March 8.—Reaching across the wide gulf of riches and social position, the hearts of two women met upon the common ground of sisterly sympathy in the Queens County Court.

The spirit radiating from this touching incident quickly permeated the entire atmosphere of the court room where Miss Edith Mortimer, pretty young society girl, is being tried for manslaughter for the death of two men run down by her automobile last October.

Quite by accident the defendant's mother, Mrs. Stanley Mortimer of Wheatley Hills, L. I., was seated by Mrs. Nathan Wasserberger, widow of one of the men Miss Mortimer's machine killed. Mrs. Mortimer, despite her handsome clothes, looked as worn and worried almost as the more humble and sad-faced little woman beside her.

As the wheels of the legal machinery began to grind, Mrs. Mortimer was seen to lean over and speak earnestly to Mrs. Wasserberger. Very soon Mrs. Wasserberger whispered back. Mrs. Wasserberger afterward said:

"Mrs. Mortimer extended her sympathy to me, and I believe it was most sincere."

Miss Mortimer's brilliant array of council battled hard for an acquittal without success. John B. Stanchfield, the chief council, argued the court should free the young defendant without a defence. He made this motion upon the ground the State had failed to place upon the witness stand the colored driver of a motor-truck, which Miss Mortimer contends was responsible for the accident. The motion was denied.

So much time was taken with this and the cross-examination of witnesses produced by the defence, that Miss Mortimer did not tell her own story. She will take the stand Monday.

The apathy which has surrounded Miss Mortimer since the case opened dropped away. Observers remarked she was nervously interested. Her chum, Miss Margaret Sargent of Boston, sat beside her.

SOLDIERS TAKEN IN RAIDS

Undesirable Women Flock to Ayer Following Disbanding of Vice Squad

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, March 8.—Lieutenant Hamlin, law enforcement officer on training camp activities, Police Chief Beatty of Ayer and a detail of officers from the Department of Justice, commanded by Edmund K. Pond, raided several houses in the vicinity of this camp early today and arrested a number of young women.

In each of the houses raided soldiers from the camp were also found.

The raid is the first step in a determined effort on the part of the authorities to rid the camp of undesirable women that have been pouring into the cantonment from Fitchburg, Shirley, Worcester, Boston and Providence during the past few weeks.

Some of these women have been found in the soldier's barracks at night, and midnight strolls, which terminated somewhere in the early dawn, have been a condition that the officers have tried in vain to cope with.

Appeals to Governor Coolidge and the Governor's council for an immediate reinstatement of the vice squad of the State public safety committee that patrolled the camp and the neighborhood, until March 1, have been made by Major-General McCain, for the safety of the thousands of men who will pass through the cantonment in the next few months.

BERLIN REVOLT IS QUELLED BY TROOPS

London, March 8.—The counter-revolt at Berlin has been quelled by Minister of War Gustave Noske, said a German wireless dispatch picked up here today.

The Spartacans have been defeated and the deserters from the government forces have been disarmed, according to the dispatch.

A great many of the Spartacus group who were taken prisoners will be shot, according gto the dispatch. The rebels who were holding the royal stables surrendered at 10 o'clock Thursday night after four mines had been dropped on their building.

The majority Socialists have withdrawn from the strike committee and have urged their members to resist the terrorism. It is doubted whether the trades unions will support the strike any longer.

Secretary of War Sends Instructions for Public Demonstration When Boys Return

Secretary of War Baker today sent a telegram to Major-General Clarence R. Edwards instructing him to begin preparations for the public reception and parade in Boston of the 26th Division, which will come home some time in April.

The Secretary's telegram embodied the instructions regarding arrangements for the public reception along with orders regarding the military reception of the men and their dispatch to Camp Devens for demobilization.

The telegram of the Secretary of War makes it certain that the return of the Yankee Division is to be featured with a parade and public welcome which will be one of the greatest spectacles ever seen in New England.

In a letter to Governor Coolidge, written before he had knowledge of the instructions regarding arrangements for the public reception along with orders regarding the military reception of the men and their dispatch to Camp Devens for demobilization, General Edwards referred to the proposed parade as sure to be "the most magnificent military spectacle people in this part of the country have ever seen."

GREAT MARTIAL SPECTACLE.

What the military men plan in the way of a parade is indicated by General Cole's further description. "A great solid body of 25,000 men in full war panoply, with helmets, packs and fixed bayonets—and with all the regimental bands consolidated into one."

Secretary Baker, in his telegram to the commander of the Department of the Northeast, expressed the desire that the welcome to the 26th be a memorable one, as "they have earned it." He also urges that arrangements be made in plenty of time so that there may be no chance of confusion and disappointment.

Colonel W. R. Bettison of Washington is representing the Secretary of War in Boston today, entertaining to what extent plans for the military

AUTOIST IN DEATH DRIVE FACES COURT

A warrant on the charge of manslaughter was refused. He was held in $500 for the Superior Court.

Nebraska Due Here Monday at 6 A. M.

The U. S. S. Nebraska, which sailed from Brest February 25 with 1,151 troops, is due in Boston on Monday at 6 a. m. This was announced by Major Michael J. Moore, adjutant-general of the Northeastern Department. The contingent includes Battery F, 54th Regiment, C. A. C., which numbers ten officers and 240 men. Of the total passenger list, forty-three are officers, twelve civilians and four enlisted men not attached to any of the divisions on board.

PROFITEERS ON FISH FORCED TO CUT PRICES

Retail fish dealers throughout New England are watching the Boston American with eagle eye. As soon as one of the new Boston American fish stores is opened in their vicinity they proceed to drop their prices. Not for years have prices been so low among fish retailers as in the vicinity of these stores.

The American has already shown that retailers have been gouging the public. That is the reason that everywhere an American fish store has been opened the public patronized it rather than the retailer with whom they have been accustomed to deal.

The public is sick of being the victims of profiteers. They know that should the American stores close—which they are not going to do—the retailer would at once raise his prices back to the same old high level.

The public is getting a square deal at the American fish stores, where fish sells for 5 cents a pound in Metropolitan Boston and 6 cents

BAR MIDNIGHT TRAFFIC ON BEACON STREET

No more "sleepless nights" for Beacon streeters.

Thanks to the Board of Street Commissioners, say these Back Bay residents!

It became known today, though not officially announced, that the board will, within the next few days, issue an order excluding all heavy traffic from Beacon street, from Charles to Massachusetts avenue, between the hours of 8 p. m. and 8 a. m.

Similar action will be taken in connection with Marlboro and Newbury streets.

Failing health, sleepless nights, and depreciation of property were given as reasons by those who protested against a noise before the commissioners January 24. Over thirty Back Bay residents told their tales of woe to the board emphasizing "no sleep" as a chief complaint.

No action was taken on the Harvard students mentioned at the hearing—who, according to one witness, were just as noisy as the men who are obliged to work in the wee small hours of the morning.

1,390,000 Yankees Faced Germans on Battlefield

By International News Service.

Washington, March 8.—The military establishment of the United States will be maintained at 509,909 officers and men until Congress enacts legislation providing otherwise, General Peyton C. March, chief of staff, announced at his weekly conference with press representatives today.

And under no conditions, he emphasized, will the number be allowed to fall below this figure until Congress takes some action.

General Pershing, he said, has been instructed by the War Department to enlist men for the regular army and assign them to regular organizations in France, thus releasing an equal number of men who enlisted only for the duration of the war. Referring to the many estimates that have been published as to the number of Americans who actually faced the enemy, General March made public figures compiled

MAYOR PETERS' PLAN TO TRIPLE TAXES ON AUTOS IS DENOUNCED

MOTORISTS PROTEST SCHEME

They Say Mayor Is Trying to Make Them Pay Loss in Liquor Fees

Because Mayor Peters anticipates a heavy deficit in revenue through the loss of money ordinarily paid into Boston's treasury for liquor licenses, he plans to make up this deficit at the expense of auto owners throughout the State.

So views William A. Thibodeau of the Automobile Legal Association the bill of Mayor Peters providing for the tripling of auto registration fees in Massachusetts. The Mayor asks that the money thus raised be distributed half and half, one-half to to be kept by the State, the other half to be distributed among the municipalities of the State.

PROPOSED TAX RATES.

Should Mayor Peters' bill be passed, the owner of a car of less than twenty horsepower will pay $13 annually for registration rather than the $5 he now pays; the man owning a car of from twenty to thirty horse power must pay $20 rather than $10; from thirty to forty horse power $45 rather than $15; from forty to fifty horse power $60 instead of $20; above fifty horse power $75 instead of $25, an increase of $50. Motorcyclists must pay $6 for registration rather than the present fee of $2.

"This would mean an additional burden on the automobilists of Massachusetts of $2,000,000 annually for which they will receive nothing," Mr. Thibodeau said.

"There are this State approximately 200,000 automobiles of all classes, supported by 180,000 automobile owners. The triple fees mean an additional burden on each tourist of about $20 annually on an average.

"A large part of the extra tax will fall on the poorer man. Every one-quarter to one-fifth of all the pleasure cars in Massachusetts are owned by men making not more than $1,500 annually. One-third of the pleasure cars are owned by men earning not more than $2,000 annually.

CHARGES CLASS LEGISLATION.

"The cost of running a pleasure automobile annually is about the original cost of the auto and, since the life of a car is about four years, the pleasure car owner already spends during the four years four times the original cost of the car. To place an additional burden of 200 per cent on the auto owner for registration fees, without giving him anything in return, is legislation of a class that has never before been passed in this country.

"This bill is without the support of the Mayors of Massachusetts or of the town authorities and is proposed and sponsored only by the Mayor and by the city of Boston, in anticipation of a very heavy deficit in its revenue because of the loss of liquor licenses next year. I think that is all there is behind the bill. It is wholly unfair and without a single redeeming feature."

AUTOISTS, ATTENTION! DO YOU KNOW THAT:

If Mayor Peters' bill to increase auto fees is passed you will have to pay

$10 in addition to the present fee of $5 for automobiles up to 20 h. p.

$20 in addition to the present fee of $10 for autos of 20 to 30 h. p.

$30 in addition to the present fee of $15 for autos of 30 to 40 h. p.

$40 in addition to the present fee of $20 for autos of 40 to 50 h. p.

$50 in addition to the present fee of $25 for autos of 50 h. p. and up.

$4 in addition to the present fee of $2 for motorcycles?

Or approximately $2,000,000 annually for which you will receive nothing?

There will be a hearing on this bill at the State House next Thursday forenoon at 10 o'clock.

CAMBRIDGE TO ASSIST WAR BONUS FIGHT

Acting Mayor Barrett Declares Men Who Won the War Should Be Rewarded

City officials of Greater Boston and organizations with country-wide affiliations praise and support the Boston American's petition for a bonus of six months' pay for soldiers, sailors and marines.

Acting Mayor James T. Barrett of Cambridge, who as president of the Common Council is assuming the reins of government in the temporary absence of Mayor Quinn, now in Washington, and Forris W. Norris, president of the Cambridge Board of Trade and a prominent merchant of that city, heartily favor the six months' bonus.

"Six months' pay should be the least the government would give as an expression of its gratitude," says Acting Mayor Barrett.

SAYS BONUS IS DUE MEN.

"Six months ago we would cheerfully have promised that much to our fighting men if they would only win the war for us," declared President Norris of the trade board.

The sentiment in favor of this petition is sweeping New England, according to Thomas F. Raidy, district supervisor of the Loyal Order of Moose at a meeting of the Quincy lodge. The lodge unanimously voted to get in line with the rest of the country and placed itself on record as favoring six months' pay for war heroes.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one and speeches were made by Past Dictator Robert Foye, Past Dictator William Carman and Dictator Joseph Hatter in behalf of the petition.

The Loyal Order of Moose had 52,163 members in service during the war. Its New England membership is 80,000, while in the country it runs well up to 700,000.

The Moose are joining with the Eagles, with labor organizations, with patriotic, veteran and fraternal organizations and with thousands of individuals, including heads of organizations, city officials, judges and citizens associations in praising and endorsing the plan to secure at least six months' extra wages for the men who fought to make democracy a reality in the world.

"No other course is just", is the concensus of opinion among people in every walk of life who have expressed their views on the way the government should reward its soldiers and sailors.

"Six months ago we would cheerfully have promised that much to our fighting men if they would only win the war for us," said President Norris of the trade board. "Now that they have won it for us why refuse it to them? I am strongly in favor of the petition and would certainly be willing to pay my share of any taxes which it might necessitate."

CALLS PAY SLIGHT REWARD.

Acting Mayor Barrett points out that six months' pay is so small in comparison with what the boys were willing to give, and thousands did give—their lives—that there should be no hesitance on the part of a generous government in bestowing it as a reward.

"All our boys were willing to make the supreme sacrifice if necessary. Six months' pay would be the least the government might do as an expression of gratitude," declared Barrett.

Soldiers and sailors themselves declare that the government could do nothing better to allay the unrest and dissatisfaction of discharged service men who are without work or money than to give them this bonus. Many of these men have no home and when they are at the end of their small resources they face the street to beg.

Petition to the Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy to Send Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Home with Six Months' Pay

Sign this petition, get your friends to sign it, and forward it to the Boston American, 40 Summer st., Boston, Mass.

To the Honorable Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War:
To the Honorable Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy:

The undersigned respectfully urge you to return to their homes as soon as possible the soldiers, sailors and marines who have accomplished so brilliantly every object America had in the war.

We urge, also, that you obtain the necessary authority to pay these men their military wages for six months, or for some sufficient period after their discharge from the army until they can obtain useful and remunerative employment.

We urge this as an act of simple justice by a great nation to its heroes.

SAYS WIFE PUT ARSENIC IN COFFEE

Chelsea Policeman Testifies in Death of Peter Archook

Testimony that arsenic was found in a bottle of coffee prepared by Mrs. Stella Archook for her husband Peter, was offered in the Chelsea court by Patrolman Cornelious Duggin at the hearing of Mrs. Archook and Alexander Kroll, a discharged army man charged with the murder of Archook on February 8.

Duggin testified that following the death of Archook he had gone to the Archook home at No. 45 Walnut street and discovered a bottle of coffee in an overcoat owned by the dead man. He took the contents, he said, to a chemist who discovered arsenic poisoning. Dr. George E. Megrath testified that he had found arsenic poisoning in the stomach of the dead man.

Duggin declared that Mrs. Archook told him she prepared the coffee for her husband the night before he died.

Following the testimony, Kroll and Mrs. Archook were remanded to the Chelsea jail without bail for hearing next Thursday.

N. H. SOLONS PROTEST AT TIME WASTERS

Concord, N. H., March 8.—Conscientious solons in attendance at the New Hampshire State Legislature are impatient to get down to the State's business. Speeches protesting against the waste of the legislators' time in the discussion of State flowers, cider, "cat bills" and the appraisal of the party societies of Chief Clerk Harris Young, were made today by indignant members. It was suggested that the matter of picking a state flower be left to the school children of the State.

Mansfield Buys Back Ferncroft Inn of "Toodles" Fame

Harry K. Mansfield is back at Ferncroft Inn in possession of that hostelry and has bought the property back from Hap Ward and took possession the first of this month. It was reported today that Mansfield had bought from M. Ryan, known by the pet name of "Toodles," who brought a $50,000 breach of promise suit against Mansfield, was also back at Ferncroft. But the presence of Miss Ryan at the inn was emphatically denied today by Richard Faulkner, the Ferncroft manager. Mr. Faulkner said that Mansfield had repurchased the property, but that Miss Ryan was not there. So far as Mr. Faulkner knew Miss Ryan was not even in this State.

The jury in the "Toodles" suit against Mansfield disagreed. Later an agreement was reached whereby Miss Ryan was said to have received $15,000. Mansfield sold out to Hap Ward and went to New Rochelle, N. Y., for a few Minutes From Broadway." There he has been running an automobile roadhouse.

BAKER ORDERS PARADE FOR 'Y. D.'

end of the reception have been completed, and will make a report to Baker on his return.

Meagher in the army commands as well as city and State officials are today busy seeing to it that when the boys of the Yankee Division come swinging down Tremont street nothing will have been left undone to show them that what they did is appreciated in the capital of New England.

It will need a welcome memorable indeed to make the boys from Massachusetts and sister States forget all they have undergone on the battlefield, the slights they have endured and the feeling of bitterness which has cropped out at seeming discrimination from time to time. But that is what Boston, backed up by New England, and now, too, by the War Department, is going to try to do—make the boys forget what they have suffered and remember only the appreciation of those at home for whom they fought.

The arrival of the 26th will not occur all in a single day, according to General Cole's letter to Governor Coolidge. "They will not arrive in one convoy, probably," he points out, and the popular conception of a victorious 26th being discharged in one huge mass from the ships at Boston piers will have to be abandoned. General Cole is rather inclined to believe that the arrival of the troops will cover a period of four or five days, and that only hard work by committee will prevent various "hitches" in the program.

It was to make such "hitches" unlikely, apparently, that the Secretary of War has ordered plans made at once for whatever celebration New England may plan.

The parade of the 26th Division, the greatest event that has transpired here in decades, would attract a correspondingly large number of people to the city, and arrangements to care for them will be a large part of the preliminary work.

Fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers and sweethearts are expected to flock into Boston in hundreds of thousands to be part of the historic gathering which will do honor to New England's own. No other parade in the smaller cities of the various units of the 26th will weaken the appeal of this great demonstration by the division as a whole. It was as the 26th that it is won it's battle and as the 26th that it has the 26th that New England wants to see it parade.

in France and which he said were as accurate as they could be under the circumstances, showing that 1,390,000 Yanks actually faced the Germans on the field of battle.

Of this number, he said 1,100,000 were divisional troops, 240,000 corps and army troops and 50,000 service or supply men.

Demobilization of the American army to date now totals 1,261,528 officers and men, General March said. Of this number, 81,330 were officers and 1,180,298 men. The total number of troops ordered demobilized has been increased to 1,613,000, the general said, leaving 351,472 officers and men yet to be discharged under the demobilization orders already issued.

To expedite demobilization and to cut down expenses, the number of demobilization centers throughout the country has been reduced from 32 to 23, General March said, and the regular camps at Dix, Meade, Yex., Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., and Ft. D. A. Russell, Wyoming, have been turned into such centers. On February 20 last American troops sick in hospitals in France from disease and injuries totaled 81,331, General March said.

For the first time General March revealed the number of suicides during the war in the American armies, both here and abroad. They totaled only 339 up to February 21, last, of which number 193 occurred in the troops of this country and 146 overseas. General March said that, according to the census reports for 1914, 1915 and 1916, this number of suicides among the American soldiers was shown to be less than the number of suicides among a similar number of civilians.

BOSTON LAGGING IN WORK FOR NEAR EAST

A drive for $1,000,000 as Boston's contribution to the national fund for the American Committees for Relief in the Near East will open March 11, Massachusetts, outside of Boston, will raise $500,000, and it is hoped to realize $10,000,000 for the nation-wide campaign.

Massachusetts headquarters of the committee is in the Little Building, and Clarke Pomeroy is in charge. Among those who have indorsed the move and are behind it are Lieutenant-Governor Channing Cox, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, Moorfield Storey and Rev. Dr. Brewer Eddy. They say that Boston is behind the sections of the country in taking hold of the campaign. The greater part of the fund will be devoted to the work of relief in Armania, although other sections of the Near East will come in for assistance.

TRAIN CREW BURNS SOCIALISTIC PAPER

Portsmouth, N. H., March 8.—About 500 copies of The Revolutionary Age, a Socialistic paper published in Boston, were distributed here today by a mysterious stranger who boarded a train at the Boston & Maine. The train carried about 1,000 workmen of the L. H. Shattuck shipyard, and made a two-minute stop here. The train crew immediately "spotted" the stranger and went through the train, collecting the literature, persuading passengers to give up copies which they held. All copies confiscated were burned. A local agent of the Department of Justice is making an investigation.

WIFE REVEALS THE STRANGE JEKYLL-HYDE LIFE OF DOCTOR CURTIS

TRAGEDY VICTIM, NORMALLY A STUDENT AND DREAMER, AT TIMES A DEMON

The American herewith presents the first authentic story of the life of Dr. "Allen B. Curtis," the Manchester, N. H., psychic, whose death in a Boston lodging house was a seven-day mystery. The facts were revealed to the American by his wife, who is living in a New England city. Her story reveals the true love of a woman for a man of brilliancy who failed to avail himself of it all.

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

Like a chapter from the life of Edgar Allen Poe or pages from Emerson Hough's "Biennerhasset" sounds the story of "Dr. Allen B. Curtis," spiritualist and astrologer, as revealed by his wife.

As with Poe and with "Blennerhasett' one finds in Dr. Curtis a man of brilliant attainments who failed to properly use them and who sunk into depths of infamy, according to his wife's revelations.

All in all, Dr. Curtis' life was that of a modern Jekyll-Hyde.

In real life "Dr. Allen B. Curtis" was Dr. James Davis, Ph. D. The world of spiritualism and astronomy has never had a brighter or more intelligent figure than he.

The American investigator located the wife of the dead spiritualist in a New England community not far from Boston, where in perfect security she resides. Even in death she loves the man whom she says for the past few years had made her life a veritable inferno. At her urgent request the writer refrains from revealing the name under which she now lives or the community in which she resides.

MARRIED IN NEW YORK.

Dr. Davis and his wife were married in New York on December 24, 1914. A marriage certificate carefully preserved and offered Sergeant Burke and the writer clearly establishes that fact. It was a civil marriage performed by an alderman of New York and duly registered. In the document the dead man set forth that he came from Richmond, Va., while his wife gave Evanston, Ill., as her home.

"I'm not his sister," she sobbed brokenly. "I was his wife. We were married. We had lived together for a time, but in the end there was a separation made necessary by his excessive indulgence in liquor. The separation was but temporary. He possessed a power through which he located me within a week of the time I left him.

"His name was James Davis. The tattoo marks on his arms, U. S. indicate that. I had known him for but a short time when we married. He was a man of refinement and one who proved to me that he was ill he claimed to be. I had no knowledge of his other self until after the ceremony and then it was all too late. I had learned to love him and through all his evil moments I continued to love him.

"And now in death I love him and revere his memory. When I first met him he was writer clearly established in science, and doing a thriving business. His students were many, for he taught them the inner workings of the occult. He was always well dressed and abundantly supplied with money. I wanted for nothing.

DISLIKED GIDDY GIRLS.

"He cared nothing for women of his own age or for the young giddy things of the city. He oftentimes told me that young giddy girls bored him. He said he wanted an older woman that he might have someone to look up to. I was eleven years older than he when we married. My life with him was pleasant in spots and unpleasant in others, and as a result of some of the happenings my hair has turned gray long before it should.

"The first year and a half of our married life had moments of pleasure and other moments of sadness. Then after our marriage he was always the perfect gentleman. Then suddenly he presented himself in a very much intoxicated condition. The goodness and kindness that had been his part were banished. In its place there came a brutal, drunken man.

"I permitted that condition to continue for a time but in the end could stand it no longer. Two years ago my husband and I entered into an agreement whereby we were to separate for six months. If at the end of six months he was doing right and I was ready to take him back, we were to communicate and relations would be resumed. It was agreed that I would send a letter to the General Delivery office in a certain postoffice in a big city on a certain day in the year.

"The conditions governing the separation were that he was to divorce himself entirely from liquor and settle down.

"It was then that I came here to live. Imagine my surprise when a week later my husband walked in on me. I had not told anybody where I was going. It was his supernatural power that directed him to me as it often had before. I represented that he was my brother.

"For a while he did good. The name I adopted was that of my paternal grandfather, and he was known by it. Prior to that when he had been arrested it was his custom to give a false name. While here he was arrested and strangely enough he gave my name. I asked him why and he answered that he couldn't tell.

"Three times after that he was arrested and finally the court sentenced him to serve a year. His term expired on the day they registered for the draft. I went to Boston and met him at the North Station. We had corresponded during the time he was confined and in our correspondence he told me of a little place in Greenfield which could be bought for $400.

GAVE CURTIS $400.

"We planned to acquire it and go there to spend the rest of our lives. I gave him $400 and left him that afternoon that he might go to a neighboring city and secure a transfer for the draft under his true name. This he did, registering as James Davis. The following day he started to meet the agent of the Greenfield property in another city.

"While there he was taken sick and returned to my house. He wouldn't permit me to call a doctor here to see him. Eventually he decided to go to Boston to be with his brother at the draft registration and there have a physician. I got him an automobile and went with him to his room.

"He had the doctor and was sent to a hospital for observation. The doctors found the $400 in his possession and retained custody of it during the time he was there. Seven weeks later he was discharged and given his money minus $71 which had been charged for treatment. I hadn't known him as a drug addict until after his return in September.

"While he was in the hospital a friend he had cultivated during his confinement visited him. In the absence of the nurse and doctor this man gave him injections of morphine. Furthermore, he left him morphine pills which my husband ate during the day. It developed him quickly once, and when he left the hospital he was a confirmed drug addict. No blame attaches to the hospital for that, however.

"From that time, early in October, until the end of January he was with me. And in that time I gave him more than $1,000, which he spent for liquor and drugs. The friends he had cultivated he left when he came home. He would go to Boston for a day or two at a time and spend his money with them.

"Then in January came his trip to Manchester, where he decided to establish himself in his science. I was overjoyed, for in the new move I felt that he would be removed from liquor and from temptation. I hoped that possibly he might reform and be the man that he really was capable of being. And for a time it appeared as though such a result had been attained.

HEARS OF HUSBAND'S DEATH.

"Imagine the blow that struck me when I read the death in Boston of 'Dr. Allen Curtis.' I knew not what to do. I went to Boston for advice. There it was that I mailed the letter to the postmaster at Manchester asking that he forward all mail for Dr. Curtis to General Delivery, East Boston, Mass.

"There was no mystery about that. I felt that the money was mine and wanted to get it back. I can use it to pay a portion of his burial expenses. I can't have the body come here for the disgrace would kill me. Why can't he be buried right from the mortuary? There's only the shell there. It's just as though a chicken had left the shell. Nothing remains. He has gone on.

"I loved him and he loved me. We were happy together except for during the times when he was drinking whiskey.

"I'm sorry he's gone but it makes life brighter and easier for me in one respect at least. I shall always love him and cherish his memory, but perhaps it is for the best that he went.

"He was not murdered nor did he commit suicide. It was merely a case of his taking an overdose of some narcotic. He told me he didn't want to use that stuff and that men had advised him against doing so. He used it, however, and thus ended a career that might well have been brilliant."

3 CHILDREN ORPHANED BY SLAYING OF MOTHER

George and Mary Seidnowy, made orphans by assassin who killed their youthful mother, who defended her honor when attacked in her home in the South End. There is another orphan, a baby, in the hospital.

Mrs. Adele Seidnowy, widow of only twenty years and mother of three children, is dead in the Southern Mortuary because she held her womanly honor of more account than life itself.

In a frightful struggle to defend herself at her home, No. 53 Hudson street, in the South End, she received eleven knife wounds.

The police are scouring the city for her brother-in-law, Michael Seidnowy. They say that he went to his sister-in-law's home in the evening and tried to force his attentions upon her. The widow refused his advances. As the police tell the story, the brother-in-law then drew a knife and stabbed the widow in both hands and in the upper part of her body.

The three children are made orphans by the slaying of their mother. Their father has been dead a year. Two of the children, George and Mary, are now at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Wadie Salhaney of No. 109 Hudson street, sister of the dead woman. The third child—the baby—is at present in a hospital. The Salhaneys have five little children, but Mrs. Salhaney declares that she will manage somehow.

Michael Seidowny, the man sought by the police, was recently discharged from the army. He had been stationed at Camp Devens.

As Mrs. Seidowny was defending herself from attack her shrieks were heard by the brothers Candoor, Abraham and Salim, living nearby. They ran to her house in time to see a man rushing out. They found the widow bleeding to death on the ground floor.

Abraham Candoor pursued the fleeing man, who turned on him, the police say, with a threat to kill. Abraham was unarmed and had to give up the pursuit.

Meanwhile the stabbed woman had been taken to the City Hospital, where she lived only a few minutes.

The police description of the fugitive is as follows: Twenty-six years old, five feet six inches tall, weighs 130 pounds, speaks no English, complexion dark, wore dark clothing when last seen, without hat or overcoat.

ARREST BARES ENOCH ARDEN ROMANCE

McNeil Facing Desertion Charge at Portsmouth as Returning Husband Forgives Wife

Portsmouth, N. H., March 8.—Enoch Arden up-to-date! Only in this case they are reunited and Friend Affinity is left in the lurch.

A singular version of the matrimonial "tangle" came to light today in the arrest of John J. McNeil of Detroit, Mich., by local police. Officers Anderson and Shannon saw the man standing in the street and questioned him. He started to run, and led them a chase for a mile. The police, in the patrol wagon, stopped frequently to alight and pursue their quary over fences and back lots, during which they fired four shots. The man was at last run down in a yard on Cabot street, in the near of the home of Mrs. William Kelley.

On searching him, the officers found a marriage certificate in the name of Frank Robinson, electrician, dated to the U. S. Baltimore, and Marguerite Philbrick of Portsmouth. According to the document, they were married September 22, 1917, at Kittery, Me., by the Rev. William Fargrave. There was also an application blank, filled out by Robinson's sister, for a position with the Singer Sewing Machine Company. This proved to be in the handwriting of the girl.

Inquiry showed, the police say, that McNeil was deserted by the United States Marine Guard at Portsmouth since last July. He deserted just one day before the battalion was ordered to France. In the meantime his allotment had sprung up between McNeil and the wife of Robinson, who was in service abroad. The two went to Newark, N. J., where the police say they lived as man and wife. From there McNeil wrote to the two girls at Kittery, using Robinson's name, and secured a copy of the marriage certificate found on him today.

Robinson recently returned on the Baltimore from the North Sea, where the ship had been laying mines, and is now in Newport, R. I. His wife is with him, the police say, having been forgiven.

McNeil is held by the local police and will be turned over to the Kittery department. Both McNeil and Mrs. Robinson are about twenty-four years old.

"Keep still in order to "keep up and don't move" the bandits turned and fled down Washington street in the direction of the Dudley street station of the Boston Elevated Railway.

Caranagno immediately notified the police and a squad of patrolmen searched the vicinity without success. Caranagno told the police that he recognized his assailants as two well known South End characters. One is known to the police as a drug peddler and drug addict.

He is described as being five feet eight inches tall and weighing 175 pounds. He is about twenty-six years old. He has a soft felt hat and a dark overcoat.

The other is said to be about thirty, five feet seven inches in height and weighs about 150 pounds.

MAETERLINCK'S NEST HAS NEW 'BLUEBIRD'

Dramatist Freed by Divorce for Mme. Le Blanc Marries Renee Dahon

Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian dramatist, over whose opera, "The Blue Bird," Boston musical and literary circles went into ecstacies a few short years ago, electrified these same circles today when news came from Paris that he had married again.

Added interest attached to the announcement when it became known that Maeterlinck had married Renee Dahon, another actress who had supplanted in his affections his divorced wife, Georgette Le Blanc, an actress well known in this city and throughout the country through her tour here several years ago.

MARRIED AT NICE.

The ceremony took place very quietly at Nice, where the author has made his home for ten years.

News of the marriage was a surprise to the literary world, although close friends of the dramatist admitted today that they knew of the love affair between Maeterlinck and his bride. It began eight years ago. The former Mlle. Dahon made her reputation as an actress when she appeared in the Maeterlinck opera, "The Blue Bird." At that time Mme. Le Blanc, wife No. 1, was playing the role of Light in the same piece.

Henry Russell, former director of the Boston Opera House, now of New York, said that he was not surprised at the recent marriage. He is a close friend of the author. The divorce and remarriage will cause changes in the cast of Maeterlinck's new play, "La Bourgeoisie de Stilleneide," in which Mme. Le Blanc was to have appeared. She withdrew from the cast when she applied for her divorce.

CREATOR OF "MELISANDE."

She was widely known as an actress, both in Europe and the United States, having been the creator of the role of Melisande in "Pelleas and Melisande."

Maeterlinck has written a large number of plays and prose works, but is often characterized first as a poet. His poetry is the quality of all his productions. His works have appealed strong to musicians, and many have been set to music. Claude Debussy has the text in artistic quality. His "Pelleas and Melisande" and "Monna Vanna" are as well known in the operatic as they are in literature. Ludwig Wullner, of Tintaglies, another drama of tragic theme, is the subject of a tone poem by Charles Loeffler, and has also been played a number of times by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

FIX GERMANY'S ARMY LIMIT AT 200,000

Force to Be Made Up Entirely of Volunteers, According to Peace Plan

Paris, March 8.—The Supreme Inter-Allied War Council met today. It was regarded as very probable that it would adopt Premier Lloyd George's motion proposing the limitation of Germany's army to 200,000 men, made up entirely of volunteers.

Negotiations for the revictualling of Germany and the supply of the German mercantile fleet, which were broken off by the German armistice commissioners at Spa, will likely be reopened immediately, according to belief expressed here today.

Following a conference of Premier Lloyd George and Premier Clemenceau, it was understood that a plan had been decided upon for supplying Germany with food until harvest time.

In the meantime, the Council of Ten, which considered the hunger crisis in Austria yesterday, has reached an agreement to relieve the situation there. The embargo on Austria will be lifted so that food can be sent in, said Herbert Hoover, head of the Inter-Allied Food Council, will be given free hand in carrying on the work.

Mr. Hoover, it is reported, is sure of success in handling the European food situation. There are now 8,000 tons of food tied up at Fiume and Trieste, which can be distributed as soon as the transportation situation is relieved.

ALLIES OPTIMISTIC.

The question of payment for food is now being considered by the allied delegates. With Germany this is a question which must be threshed out at Spa, but the allied envoys are optimistic of reaching a favorable solution.

(Spa is the seat of the armistice negotiations.)

The allies know that the Germans have supplies of potash, nitrates and other essentials which they can exchange for food.

The hitch in the armistice negotiations at Spa was due entirely to the Germans, because of their refusal to turn over unarmed merchant ships without assurances of food until harvest time, but a plan has been drawn up which is believed to remove all objections. It is believed that Colonel E. M. House of the American commission has virtually agreed to this solution, as well as Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau.

The main question now has narrowed down to the matter of getting ships from Germany, payment for supplies and a few minor details to which the Germans must assent.

Secretary Lansing of the American delegation has offered a resolution to the Big Five council dealing with certain aspects of the cable situation.

(A cablegram to the International News Service from Paris yesterday said the American envoys were working for free cable communication with all parts of the world.)

MUST SETTLE ITALIAN DISPUTE.

President Wilson will be called upon immediately after his return to settle the quarrel between the Italians and the Jugo-Slavs, it was understood today. According to reports the peace delegates have agreed to this method of settling the knotty problem.

(The territorial dispute between the Italians and the Jugo-Slavs over the land bordering the northern shores of the Adriatic has threatened to bring on further fighting in Southern Europe. The Italian military mission at Laibach was expelled by the Serbians, who are supporting the Jugo-Slav government, and there was an unconfirmed rumor in circulation recently that an armed clash had taken place.)

The peace delegates are anxiously waiting to see whether President Wilson proposes any amendments to the League of Nations covenant as a result of the criticism by certain statesmen in Washington.

So far, not a single amendment has been submitted to the constitution, although the nations represented at the conference were able to do so through the peace bureau.

This does not mean, however, that the European powers are by any means completely satisfied with the present covenant. But none of them felt disposed, in the absence of President Wilson, to put forward ideas for the modification of the text until the particulars set forth therein.

If, however, President Wilson leads the way himself by proposing amendments, propositions are expected to flow in from the other powers as a result.

"PRINCESS PAT'S" FAREWELL TO TROOPS

COOLIDGE ASKS HONORS FOR EDWARDS

The suggestion that Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, former commander of the brave Yankee Division in France, be given the rank of major-general in the regular army meets with the approval of Governor Coolidge.

Failure of the War Department to recognize the leader of the 26th Division by the bestowal of the Distinguished Service Cross, as happened in the case of a number of general officers who did not see overseas service, has occasioned considerable wonder among New Englanders.

New England public officials have been strong in their praise of General Edwards and urge that he be given the medal of distinction or be retained with his present rank in the regular army.

GOVERNOR CALVIN COOLIDGE: The suggestion that the rank of Major General Edwards be maintained is one which I know will meet with the approval of all the people of New England. We should not wish to seem to interfere with a settled policy of the War Department, but if there is anything that can be done to keep Major General Edwards in the same rank as he now holds, I know it will be a great satisfaction to all who have come in contact with the splendid service which he has rendered to his country during the present war.

GOVERNOR CARL E. MILLIKEN OF MAINE: From my own acquaintance with General Edwards and the universal testimony of men in his command, I believe that he well merits this honor to the highest recognition.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR COX: From my judgment, General Edwards richly deserves all honors. He has done great work and has the love of all the men of his division. I would like to see him get the highest honors.

MAYOR ANDREW J. PETERS: I am exceedingly pleased to learn that it has been suggested to give to Major-General Clarence R. Edwards the rank of major-general in the regular army. I cannot express myself too strongly as in accord with the suggestion and I sincerely hope that the War College will act favorably on it. General Edwards has won the right to this honor and I feel that this recognition of his devoted service is due him.

MISS ESTA MAE BARR, managing director of the 101st Infantry Auxiliary: I indorse, a dozen times, Senator Lodge's sentiments toward the American's suggestion to make General Edwards a permanent major-general and to give him the Distinguished Service Order. If there is one man who fought in this war who ought to have this recognition, it is General Edwards. Many a mother would never have had her son restored to her alive but for the care General Edwards took of his boys. He was to them not only a commanding officer, but a father as well. No general in the war equalled, no general surpassed, General Edward's achievement. He should have the recognition asked for him at once.

MRS. GEORGE TILLINGHAST, legislative chairman of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association: To make General Edwards a permanent major-general of the line in peace times and to confer upon him the Distinguished Service Order is but an act of simple justice, which Massachusetts citizens should expect to have accorded the general who so wonderfully led their soldiers in battle. The general deserves it; there are no two opinions possible on this point. We all know that no general in the war rendered more distinguished service. Therefore, let him have the proper recognition. His glory and his honors would but be fitting recognition for Massachusetts.

mother of Colonel Edward L. Logan, and member of the 101st Auxiliary Board: If any man deserves the distinction proposed, General Edwards deserves it. As the mother of two soldiers, and as a woman who likes to see plain justice done the men who fought our battles in France, I earnestly hope General Edwards will become Major-General Edwards in peace times, as well as in war times. His care for his boys is well known. His unflinching, fearless performance of duty is also well known. I certainly indorse the movement to give him the recognition that has long been due him.

MISS MARY A. BARR, Public Safety Committee: There is no honor too high for General Edwards, all patriots, with loyalty in their hearts, must desire with fervent hope the recognition proposed for the general. Certainly, he should be made permanent Major-General Edwards. Certainly he should receive the Distinguished Service Cross. Any honor that can be given him will but reflect on the community of Massachusetts and Boston to which he belongs. May this movement be speedily successful.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH O'NEIL, Federal Trust Company:

I'm for Major-General Edwards every time. Go to it, General Edwards ought to get the Distinguished Service Medal. I am in favor of making him a permanent major-general in the Regular Army. When it comes to honor for Major-General Clarence R. Edwards you can always count on me. He deserves every honor on the calendar.

MRS. WINONA OSBORNE PINKHAM, Chairman of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association for Good Government:

While not an expert on military matters, I feel sure that General Edwards should be given the recognition which the American suggests. The public knows his excellent record so well it needs no reminder. It would be but recognition for what Massachusetts, Boston and the 26th Division contributed to win the war, to confer honors upon the leader of the soldiers of this district.

BIG FALLING OFF IN LEGISLATIVE ACTS

Governor Coolidge has signed but 109 acts and resolves as compared with 148 signed at the corresponding stage of last year's session. In this year's list are included 89 special acts, 27 general acts and 4 resolves. Appropriations approved this year total only $15,000, as compared with $1,325,300.46 on the same date last year.

$25,000 DAMAGE FOR STREET EXTENSION

Mrs. Eva C. Moore has agreed to accept from the city $25,000 for damages to her estate on Stanhope street, caused by the extension of Clarendon street by order of the street commissioners.

GENERAL EDWARDS

From Today's Boston Post.

The people of this section of the land will feel very much in agreement with Senator Lodge in his opinion that General Edwards should receive his appointment as Major-General in the regular line.

General Edwards has in his two sojourns among us won the admiration, affection and respect of the whole public. They know that he has acquitted himself well here. And they feel just as certain that his record abroad has been of the first order of excellence.

Without undertaking to delve into the reasons why General Edwards has been jumped by several officers of shorter service than he, it may be said emphatically that popular sentiment hereabout fully believes that he ought to be given the higher rank to which he is entitled.

26 DEAD IN RIOT BY CANADIAN TROOPS

London, March 8.—Twenty-six persons are reported to have been killed in rioting by Canadian soldiers at Kinmel Park military camp, near Rhyl, Wales, said a dispatch to the Star today. Among those reported killed was a major from New Brunswick, who had won the Victoria Cross during the war.

A dispatch to the Evening News estimated the dead at twelve and information received by the Daily Mail put the number at nine. About forty were wounded, it was said. Wounded soldiers took part.

The trouble arose over slowness of demobilization. The men charged that priority in sending soldiers home was given to draftee troops. There were about 25,000 volunteers in the camp.

The War Office issued a statement this afternoon, saying the trouble had been adjusted and quiet restored.

Stores were broken into and pillaged and the canteens at the camp were looted. All of the saloons in Rhyl were ordered closed.

Damage to the extent of $200,000 was done.

Nelson of Winchester accuses Eva G. Nelson of Winchester of infidelity and wants custody of a child. Sadie B. Maroney of Lowell wants a divorce from Thomas M. Maroney on the ground of desertion. They have been married since 1910. Agnes R. Frieau of Cambridge seeks divorce from Frederick J. Frieau of Boston, charging cruel and abusive treatment.

REPORT ALLIES AGREE TO SHARE GERMAN FLEET

Washington, However, Doubts Statement That U. S. Would Favor Sinking Warships

By International News Service.

Paris, March 8.—The allied powers have agreed to distribute the surrendered German fleet among themselves, it was understood here today. The United States and Great Britain are said to favor sinking the ships that fail to them.

Washington, March 8.—If the surrendered German fleet is distributed among the allied nations, that portion falling to the United States will be put into commission as a part of the American navy. This was the firm belief of high naval officers here today, following the announcement that such a distribution had been agreed upon in Paris.

It was pointed out that the suggestion that the German vessels be sunk or scrapped has met with favor only in certain circles, and that President Wilson himself has practically gone on record as opposing any such course.

In a letter to Representative Fuller of Massachusetts, the President wrote that personally he was opposed to the sinking of the fleet, now that he was withholding final judgment until he has had an opportunity to confer with authoritative naval men when he returned to Paris. However, the opinion here was that advocates of destruction for the fleet would be greatly outnumbered.

And in view of the great building program, that has been advocated by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, there is a strong conviction in many official circles that as much money as possible should be saved by putting America's share of the German fleet into commission.

Four hundred persons were killed and wounded in the street fighting between Spartacans and government troops in Gerlin, said another German wireless dispatch picked up here today. The government has restored order in the capital, and all of the important buildings are in the hands of government troops, the radiogram added.

AMERICANS ASK VAST SUM OF GERMANS

By International News Service.

Washington, March 8.—Claims already filed with the State Department by American citizens against the central powers for payment for loss and injury of life and destruction and injury of property already aggregate $750,000,000.

The depredations were all committed by the central powers before the United States entered the war against Germany it is assumed, for had they been committed while the United States was in the war these claims probably would come under the head of indemnities.

The claims already filed numbered thousands. Many additional claims are expected which will increase materially the aggregate amount claimed from the central powers. The claims are divided under two headings—depredations committed by Germany in her unrestricted submarine warfare and other acts of the central powers.

Under the first heading will come the claims of Americans for loss of life or injury, the loss or partial destruction of American vessels, the loss of or injury to personal property and other miscellaneous claims.

Under the second heading will come claims for the destruction or requisition of American property in enemy territory or territory occupied by the central powers. The property owned by American concerns and American citizens in this territory had an aggregate worth of $300,000,000, it was estimated at the State Department, and heavy losses were inflicted.

These claims will be presented to the American delegation at the peace conference, which, in turn, will submit them for insertion in the treaty of peace.

FRANCIS TESTIFIES BEFORE SENATORS

Washington, March 8.—On the second anniversary of the first rumblings of the Russian revolution, David R. Francis, American Ambassador to Russia, today took the stand before the Senate Bolshevik Committee. He was delighted, he said, when the first revolution broke out, and was the first to recommend that the provisional Russian government be recognized by the United States. However, he "constantly recommended against recognition of the Bolsheviks by the United States." "Had the beginning of the war been postponed for five years," Francis said, "Germany would have had such a foothold in Russia that it would have been impossible to dislodge her."

a pound outside of ten miles from the city.

The American stores are selling frozen fish. They are selling it as frozen fish, unlike unscrupulous retailers, who thaw the fish and sell it as fresh caught fish. Very soon the American hopes to be able to place fresh fish on the market in its stores at rates similar to those now prevailing.

The fish being offered by the American in its stores throughout New England was frozen as soon as it was landed. On the other hand, so-called "fresh fish" offered for sale by many retailers was a fortnight or more old before reaching port and has aged another week or more in the ice box of the retailer.

Crowds stormed the American's new stores in Lawrence, Haverhill, Nashua and Lowell. Exceptional good judgment was shown by the customers of the Lawrence store, who demanded whiting. This fish, little known by the average American, is eaten in great quantities in Europe, where it is considered a delicacy.

In Lowell the Boston American market is located at No. 125 Page street a few seconds' walk from the main square of the city. In Nashua it is located in Railroad square, the centre of the town. In Lawrence the location is easy of access to every part of the busy city, and the same is true of Haverhill, where the Boston American's station is on the main street.

Haddock, cod, Boston bluefish, finan haddie, whiting and herring will continue on sale in all the Boston American stores

A GOOD WAY TO SAVE

"In times like these when economy is so essential, I know of no better way to save than to have the entire family wear Neolin soles," writes B. F. Williams, Rochester, N. Y.

In his letter Mr. Williams tells of a pair of Neolin-soled shoes which he has worn constantly for four months. "The soles still look like new," he says.

You, too, will think there is no better way to save, when once you have tried shoes with these long-wearing, comfortable, and waterproof soles. They come in many styles for every member of the family. Any good repair shops carry Neolin Soles for re-soling. They are made scientifically by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels—guaranteed to outwear all other heels.

QUARTET OF MEN STARS INVADE BOSTON

There is great distress among the newspaper artists who make up the picture layouts for the coming week, for there are no less than seven male stars in town, and everybody knows that masculine photographs do not measure up with feminine ones from a beauty standpoint.

A complete quartet of he-stars reach Boston Monday. They are William Hodge, who returns with "A Cure for Curables," and succeeds Leo Carrillo, main star number eight—girls, what's the matter with you—at the Plymouth; Willie Collier in "Nothing but Lies" at the Wilbur, George Arliss in "The Mollusc" at the Hollis and Lou Tellegen in "Blind Youth" at the Tremont.

Just add to these Fred Stone in "Jack O' Lantern" and the twin stars McIntyre and Heath at the Majestic and you have seven dramatic stars who shave and wear trousers.

What's to be done about it? Where are the rights of women? Here's a real cause for those militant suffragists who passed up some good meals in the city jail last week because they weren't allowed to pester the President.

The quartet of male beauties who will be in our midst next Monday offer every variety of dramatic expression and style.

Hodge and Collier represent two types of American comedian. Collier the dry, peanut-like individual who is funniest when in trouble, and Hodge, the lanky, drawling Hoosier who gets more laugh with less work than anybody in the world.

George Arliss is an Englishman, a character actor of great skill, whose Disraeli, Paganini and Hamilton were remarkable stage portraits, and whose work in "The Mollusc" is said to be distinguished.

Plays in Foreign Tongue.

Tellegen works under the handicap of acting in a language not his own. He came to this country with Sarah Bernhardt, liked the place and remained. In such farces as "Taking Chances," his Gallic temperament was at his best. Recently his personal attractions have been capitalized in melodramas which didn't suit him so well.

And here in Boston he brings special interest to the stage for those who won Geraldine Farrar, our own native opera star. The singer is coming to Boston with her husband and will view the opening performance at the Tremont from a box.

Ran Away from Home.

Willie Collier ran away from home in 1873 when he was ten years old. He joined a juvenile pinafore company, salary $3.50 per week, but he made another dollar and a half for handling the company's baggage. He remained with this troupe for some months until his parents located him. They took him home, spanked him and sent him to school for four years more.

About that time he got a job as call boy in Daly's Theatre and for six years knocked upon the doors of the great actors of the period who worked for the late Augustin Daly. Collier treasures his experiences in Daly's plays everything else.

His first part came in "Samson and Goliah," when without speaking a word he made such an impression that John Russell promptly corralled him for Daly's company. Among Afterwards he appeared in "Hoss and Hoss," "A Back Number," "Little Christopher," "A Tycoon From India," "The Man From Mexico," and a revival of "The Rivals."

In 1901 he was first starred, appearing in "On the Quiet." Then he joined Weber and Fields at their celebrated music hall and subsequently went to London. He wrote "Caught in the Rain" himself and is the author or co-author of "Never Say Die," "I'll Be Hanged If I Do" and "A Little Water on the Side."

Collier and George Cohan started together in Cohan's Revue and in several Lambs Gambols.

Twain on Hodge.

Townsend Walsh, former dramatic critic, who is the "voice crying in the wilderness" for William Hodge tells me that the late Mark Twain was a particular admirer of his star and wrote about him to another celebrated author, Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

Said Twain, "Take a good look at him. To me he is the most delightful impersonator of American rural characters of our time. He is much more than an eccentric comedian, in all that he does he is the master of a sense of artistic propriety. No comedian since Jefferson and John T. Raymond can make you laugh more heartily and leave you afterwards with your self-respect undiminished."

Mark Twain never saw Fatty Arbuckle or Charlie Chaplin, but if he had, I don't think he would have changed his phrase.

Twain first saw Hodge when he appeared in New York with Chauncey Olcott in "Edgewood Parson." After seeing him in "The Man from Home," he went around to the actors' dressing room and introduced himself. They became fast friends.

Arliss in Modern Garb.

Just let an actor get a reputation for a particular line of roles, and he immediately itches to show the public that he doesn't depend upon wig and makeup and costuming for his success. George Arliss, who has come to be known as a "costume" actor, has dropped his historical sojgs for a season to appear in modern dress in "The Mollusc" and "The Well-Remembered Voice."

Before his historical series Arliss, you will remember, played "The Devil," "The New York Idea," a fine comedy, by the way; "Leah Kleschna," and in various Ibsen roles with Mrs. Fiske.

"The Mollusc" is not exactly a novelty in Boston. It was done here some years ago by the late Sir Charles Wyndham. The Barrie playlet, if I am not mistaken, has not been given in Boston at all.

Technique of Harlequin.

Joseph C. Smith, stage director of "Take It From Me," is one of the few men still on the stage in this country who can qualify as a harlequin.

A harlequin wears a costume of diamond squares of many colors. He wears a mask and a wand. Harlequitt ice cream took its name because it also is composed of several creams of different colors.

"My father, the late George W. Smith," said the stage manager during a few moments' leisure, "was one of the greatest harlequins of his day and he taught me most of his tricks. Believe me, it was work. Anyone who has learned the art of doing a double turn in the air has worked.

"A harlequin must be a good pantomimist, a dancer and an acrobat. Perhaps the most difficult feat is to whirl in the air with his feet off the ground. In doing a double somersault an acrobat takes a running jump and lands several yards away. The harlequin jumps straight up into the air, does the somersault and lands back almost on the same spot.

"The art was won to descend from father to son, but it is practically forgotten for it is too hard, too dangerous and not sufficiently remunerative. However, once you have learned it, you don't forget it. I am forty years old, but I can still do a triple turn. But I don't practice much, I admit."

Miss Johns Bucks Tradition.

Florence Johns, who is now playing Peggy Lawrence in "The Crowded Hour," is giving an excellent performance of one of the most unusual characters in modern drama. Miss Johns differs sharply with the ordinary actress because she believes that the is a role which can be best played without feeling and living the part.

"Through my early days in the profession I cherished the belief so common in tyros that to get the best of a character one had to live it. And when I played in stock I used to find myself positively exhausted at the end of a week while those about me were unruffled. I now believe that the actress who can stand at one side and watch and study her own work is more likely to succeed than the girl who plunges into the role and tries to live it."

New Leading Woman for Arlington.

A new leading lady makes her debut at the Arlington next Monday in the person of Ruth Robinson, who plays the heroine of "The Lion and the Mouse." Miss Robinson has appeared with the Morosco Stock in Los Angeles, with several Poli stock companies and Keith companies, and has played a hundred leading roles.

It is a curious coincidence that the big role in which "The Lion and the Mouse" was created by one of the most popular actors who ever played the Hollis Street, Edward Sothern, in a revival next week, Dudley Ayres will take Mr. Bresse's role.

Not Worrying About Jobs.

The difficulties of sending the enlisted men back to civil occupations are non-existent with the members of the U. S. Jazz Band, the organization of musicians who originally were formed among the boys stationed at Boston and who later, when they gave their concerts, wrought such triumphs in this country and abroad. And now they have been summoned to tour in other large cities for some time to come, so there is no sign of demobilization for the U. S. Jazz Band. As they were welcomed home, again they are to give a farewell concert at the Tremont Theatre tomorrow evening.

Usually riding the high wave of popularity of jazz music, this band is unique among musical organizations. Its first front founded by Ensign Alfred J. Moore, it was ostensibly to amuse the men of the naval training camp in this city. None of its original members dohjured that it would be anything but a band that would play its short time and then be swallowed up in the multitude of other bands. But it was the genius of their leader or the individual talents of the men, both, for it has developed a type of music so superior to other military and naval bands that followed in imitation that it was the first band to be a premiere organization in this field.

WILBUR THEATRE

William Collier will be seen in a new play called "Nothing But Lies" at the Wilbur on Monday. Those who are seeking seriousness in your entertainment, you had better not go to see "Nothing But Lies." You will be sorry if you don't see this play, for it has just finished an all season's run at the Longacre Theatre in New York.

"Nothing But Lies" is a farce and was written to create laughter. Being this country's leading comedian ought to make one a fairly good judge of a play. Mr. Collier thinks "Nothing But Lies" is one of the best laugh-making plays he has had and he is making his experience and artistic judgment on the verdict of the playgoing public.

No better cast of farceurs was ever gathered together than is in his support. Edith Hallor is his leading woman, and Florence Enright and Mary Harper have important parts. Some of his other aides are Ranley Holmes, William Riley Hatch, Frank Monroe, Thomas Irwin, Clyde North, Robert Strange, Gordon Burby and others.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

An evening at the theatre with George Arliss, Sir James M. Barrie and Robert Louis is the treat to be served at the Hollis street playhouse beginning Monday evening. For the always delightful and distinguished Mr. Arliss is coming to us with a notable double bill that not only includes Mr. Davies' sparkling threeact comedy, "The Mollusc," but the newest Barrie playlet, "A Well-Remembered Voice," said by the London critics to be Barrie's finest bit of writing since the war.

In "The Mollusc," where he is seen as Tom Kemp, the youngish man-of-the-world Britisher who has been adventuring in Colorado mining camps and comes back to England to struggle most humorously with the languid and lovely sister who works so persistently to escape work. There is a love story also in the most sparkling vein of the clever author of "Counsy Kate" and "Outcast."

Manager George C. Tyler has given Mr. Arliss a splendid company, with Phillip Merivale, Olive Tell, Viva Birkett and Mrs. Arliss sharing the important roles in both pieces.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

The kind tidings of the return to the Plymouth Theatre Monday night of William Hodge, that most popular representative of American comedians, on his successful comedy, "A Cure for Curables," is sure passage for a fortnight of keen pleasure for the laughter-loving public.

Mr. Hodge is, undoubtedly, at his best in the role of the young Kentucky physician. More need not be said, for everyone knows how perfect is his heat.

"A Cure for Curables" was written by Earl Derr Biggers in collaboration with Mr. Hodge, and their source of inspiration was a short story by Corra Harris. All of William Hodge's plays are wholesome and homely, and their popular appeal is unquestioned. Miss Clara Moores, a young actress of charm and beauty, is again his leading woman this season.

TREMONT THEATRE

Lou Tellegen, the brilliant young actor, will come to the Tremont Theatre on Monday, March 10, for two weeks only. The play is called "Blind Youth," and was written by Willard Mack and Mr. Tellegen. It was during his younger years as an art student in Paris that Mr. Tellegen gathered the material for the story of "Blind Youth." The tale relates how a young artist, left in Paris by his American mother, falls into the clutches of an adventuress. Finding his love false, he takes to drink and only the story of a fellow artist brings him to his senses and sends him to America. There he finds redemption through a lovely American girl. The adventuress follows him and seeks to marry his half-brother. To prevent this, the artist makes an appointment with her, to which the brother calls the artist's fiance. In this scene is the big thrill of the play. The artist, however, justifies himself and all ends happily.

Mr. Tellegen is bringing with him an excellent company of players including the artists who have appeared with him during his New York engagement. The cast includes Jennie A. Eustace, Jean Robertson, Miriam Sears, Mark Smith, Ralph Locke, Maria Norsilina, Nan DeVoe, Sidney Riggs and John Holland.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

One of the most popular of modern American dramas has been selected for revival at the Arlington Theatre during the coming week. "The Lion and the Mouse" is the work of Charles Klein, and it is a strong, stirring and sincere play, dealing with the actual life of the people in this country as it is lived today in certain political, business and social circles. The leading character, John Burkett Ryder, is a Napoleon of finance who is reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in the world, an able financier and a masterful man who has won his way to success through his own ability.

Dudley Ayres will appear as Jefferson Ryder, Mark Kent as John Burkett Ryder, his father and the Napoleon of finance, and Miss Ruth Robinson will make her debut at that theatre in the role of Shirley Rossmore.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Marie Cahill, with a new program of song hits, is the headliner at Keith's Theatre the coming week. This famous stage beauty and star of many musical successes will sing a program of songs never heard before. She always likes to come to Boston with new songs, for if they are a success here she is confident they will be the same everywhere else.

There are others on the program that could easily be classed as headliners. Wellington Cross, the American musical comedy favorite, has many surprising stories and songs. Leo Teen Mei will offer a Chinese conception of American vaudeville.

TREMONT TEMPLE

"The Heart of Humanity," a multiple reel photoplay, will be presented by the Gordon-Mayer Film Corporation for a limited engagement at the Tremont Temple beginning with the Monday evening performances and twice daily thereafter. It comes after a sensational engagement in New York at the Broadway Theatre.

The theme of the story deals with that all consuming topic of love, and the whole course of its drama courses along a path wherein is revealed the power of love in human affairs.

It is said to be a vivid, swift marching story detailing the experiences of a young wife who is so moved by the sufferings of others that she leaves her home to minister to a stricken people. It is while in this charitable mission that she meets with the greatest of trials that eventually precipitates a crisis which is the peak of the drama.

Dorothy Phillips, a favored star of the screen through her ability to depict emotional roles, is the leading player pictured, and the supporting cast includes such well-known players as William Stowell, Pat O'Malley, Robert Anderson, Margaret Mann, Walt Whitman, George Braidwood, George Hackathorn and Gloria Joy. The production is directed by Allen Holubar. Seats are reserved in advance. Afternoon performances begin at 2:15 and evenings at 8:15.

"THE BIG CHANCE"

Mary Nash will make her first appearance in Boston as a full-fledged star in the leading role of "The Big Chance," the play which comes direct from its long New York run with the original company to the Majestic Theatre March 17. Miss Nash plays the role of a girl from New Bedford who goes to New York and lives with her sweetheart despite the conventions. Her lover has three friends who are just about as worthless as himself. Each secretly hopes to win the girl for himself. Then the war breaks out and the girl recognizes it as "The big chance" for all of them.

Mary Nash will have in association such well-known players as William J. Kelly, William P. Meehan, Harry Robert, Ramsey Wallace, Anna Mack Berlein, Katharine Harris, Barrymore and others.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA.

There is a widespread interest in the announcement that the screen version of "Common Clay," the Harvard prize play, starring beautiful Fannie Ward, will be shown this week at Gordon's Olympia.

Cleves Kinkead, the author, is said to have taken as the key note of "Common Clay" the quotation from Kipling's poem, which reads:

"For the Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady

and indeed through the course of the drama this fact is readily apparent.

Fannie Ward has starred in many powerful dramas, but in "Common Clay" she eclipses every previous effort of emotional action.

It would be hard to pick a more splendid bill of vaudeville than that provided for this week. It sparkles with diversity. The always popular Olympia News Weekly and a number of good comedies completes the program.

O'SULLIVAN CONCERT

After considering several score of requests for Irish songs for his concert for March 12, John O'Sullivan, the Chicago Opera tenor, has named these upon his program. "Let Erin Remember," "Wearing of the Green," "O'Donnell Aboo" and "Song of the Sons of Erin." His interpretation of these songs differs somewhat from the conventional. "Let Erin Remember" has been specially arranged by O'Sullivan himself so that the melody is boldly marked and moves like the "Marseillaise." Miss Hazel Clark, the pianiste, who will assist him, is one of the best known woman conductors in America, as well as a concert virtuosa of merit.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

A bill of combined vaudeville and photoplay features of exceptional promise is announced for the first half of the week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. The leading act will be the musical comedietta, "Love & Kisses," presented by a company of ten, headed by Eddie Riley, Jack Collins and Irene Langley. This has been acclaimed as the smartest and brightest act of its kind now touring vaudeville. Another deserving prominent mention is the act of Herbert Brooks & Company in mysterious feats, among which is his $20,000 steel chest mystery. Other acts will be Grace Leonard & Song, assisted by Jack Neil at the piano; and Pollard, a grotesque comedian. On the screen there will be shown the latest news features, Fatty Arbuckle in "Love," depicting the comedian as a Lothario of sorts, and the photoplay, "Extravagance," picturing Dorothy Dalton as the masterful wife of a wealthy man who chases butterflies of pretence and sham, and who is cured of her failing through a serious adventure. There will be an entire change of bill on Thursday, when the leading act will be the Golden Troupe of Russian entertainers.

"ADAM AND EVA"

Beginning on Monday evening, March 17, there will be presented for the first time in Boston at Keeney's Park Square Theatre, "Adam and Eva," a new comedy written by Guy Bolton and George Middleton.

FORTUNE AND FAME IN 6 YEARS

Among film stars who have advanced to the first rank in a comparatively short time, Norma Talmadge stands out pre-eminently. Six years ago, this now famous artist of the screen was a mere child with a suddenly developed ambition to become a motion picture actress.

"I had to do something," Miss Talmadge says, "and one day I hressed into a studio and, to my own great surprise, was given a part."

In those days there were no great film actresses; the art of the cinema was in its infancy. "Everybody," to quote Miss Talmadge again, "got twenty-five dollars a week, and when my first pay day came around, I opened my envelope, and when I found the actual money there I took it home and asked my mother if she thought that could really be the square?"

Her new picture, "The Probation Wife," will have the first showings at the Orpheum Theatre the last half of next week.

Got a Scare.

When Bryant Washburn, the motion picture star, was told that Mary Thurman was to have an important role in his new photoplay, "Poor Boob," which will have its first Boston showings all of next week at the Beacon Theatre, he was extremely pigased, for he remembered the charm of this well-known Mack Sennett comedy player.

He looked forward to seeing her during the making of the picture at the studio, but he couldn't find her. Finally he asked the director if it was all a mistake that she was going to make her dramatic debut in "Poor Boob?"

"Not on your life," said the director. "There she is over there, and you're going to have a scene with her as soon as we finish with this set." Washburn looked—and saw a fat, clumsily attired creature, weighing at least 200 pounds. At first he thought he was either mad or being kidded, for he remembered her a slight, slim girl.

Then he recalled the script, and he remembered that the part she played was that of his boyhood sweetheart, who had changed for the worse during the passing of the years. So all was well, and the scene went along beautifully.

U. S. JAZZ BAND CONCERT

The U. S. Jazz Band, with Ensign Alfred J. Moore as director, will give a farewell concert of jazz music at the Tremont Theatre tomorrow night. This band of musicians which had a sensational career while in the United States Navy service during which time it was rated as the best jazz band in the world, is preparing for a short concert tour before its members retire to civil life. At its welcome home concert, which was at the Colonial Theatre two weeks ago, the demand for tickets was so great that enough patrons were unable to procure tickets to fill the house twice over. So in order to meet the general demand this concert has been arranged for the Tremont Theatre.

McISAAC says that

"TAKE IT FROM ME," the spirited farcical comedy headed by Vera Michelena at the Shubert, begins its fifth week of big business. It deals with how not to run a department store.

FRED STONE, in "Jack o' Lantern," begins his twelfth week at the Colonial Monday. A speedy, clean, musical comedy with a great star.

McINTYRE AND HEATH, in "Hello, Alexander," commence their final week in Boston. A big musical vaudeville and extravaganza which pleases those who enjoy such entertainment. Majestic.

"THE CROWDED HOUR" soon departs from the Park Square. A very strong play of the war zone, with a good company.

"GARSIDE'S CAREER" at the Copley. A bright, English comedy of politics and labor. Worth seeing.

NEW WAR FILM AT TREMONT TEMPLE

"Hearts of Humanity" Typifies Work of Red Cross Nurse

"The Heart of Humanity," directed and produced by Allen Holubar and starring Dorothy Phillips, typifying the work of the Red Cross nurse in France, presents one of the greatest of all war plays—though rightfully it should not be called a war story, but a love story with war as its background.

More correctly might this drama be called a catalogue of the human emotions, for in the vast accomplishment is expressed every big emotion. There is heroism, sorrow, hate, anger, love, living, sympathy, and a supreme sacrifice that, it is said by critics who have seen the picture, will bring to all who view the huge effort a clearer understanding of what is due our womankind.

Peaceful countrysides contrast the turmoil of battlefields; hate is placed in contrast with love; intelligence balances misunderstanding, and Universe vitally wrought, is seen succeeded by the service of reconstruction.

And through all the tragedy of the new screen drama, which cinema experts say will live as one of the milestones of production, is expressed the sublime grace of the "mother-heart."

In it is the glory of an immaculate fire, which brings to thousands of homeless Belgian orphans light, love and the gleanings of beauty so indispensable to the happy development of all mankind.

The title role is portrayed by Dorothy Phillips, who has advanced herself beyond the dreams of her admirers. Miss Phillips is supported by a strong cast of capable performers, including William Stowell, Margaret Mann, Pat O'Malley, Robert Anderson, Gloria Joy, Walt Whitman, and George Hackathorn.

"The Heart of Humanity" will be shown at the Tremont Temple under the supervision of the Gordon-Mayer Film Corporation, next Monday evening, March 10.

GLOBE THEATRE

A bill of photoplays promising a remarkably entertaining program is announced for the week at Loew's Globe Theatre. Elsie Ferguson will be shown in "The Marriage Price," in which she is pictured as a rich society girl who finds herself engulfed in a serious problem through the untimely death of her father. The solving of the problem entails difficulties which result in stirring moments of drama. The first showings in Boston will be given of Dorothy Dalton in "Extravagance," the central role of which is the young wife of a wealthy broker whose extravagances and sham chasing propensities precipitate a crisis. How she is brought to realize her error and reverts to sensible practices forms the drama of the story. There will also be shown Fatty Arbuckle in his latest film farce, "Love."

BEACON THEATRE

Generosity of offerings mark the announcement of first run photoplays to be shown at the Beacon Theatre, the bill running unchanged throughout the week. Pauline Frederick will be shown in "The Woman on the Index," announced as a strong story of a woman's fight against unjust accusation that threatens to ruin her after life. Bryant Washburn will be shown in "Poor Book," in which he is pictured as a sufferer from trailing illluck that pursued him insistently. Good luck now pursues him and turns all he touches into success with the result that he becomes wealthy and wins the girl he loves. The comedy will be Fatty Arbuckle's new film farce, "Love."

MODERN THEATRE

Three photoplay attractions of first eminence are contained in the bill announced to be shown for the first time in Boston throughout the week at the Modern Theatre. Pauline Frederick will be shown pictured in "The Woman on the Index," said to be a powerful story of a woman's battle against a reputation which threatens to oust her from society. From advance reports Miss Frederick has a role which calls upon her best talents. Bryant Washburn will be shown in "The Poor Book," in which he is pictured as a young man in a small town who is a commercial failure.

BOSTON THEATRE

"For the Freedom of the East," with Lady Tsen Mei as the star, is the feature film at the Boston Theatre the coming week. It is one of the unusual plays and is full of interesting facts about the Orient. Lady Tsen Mei, who is Chinese, will watch the picture in many performances. She is on the bill at Kieth's and after her own performances will go right to the Boston Theatre to see her picture. She tries to keep with her picture as much as possible.

NEW WALDORF THEATRE

The opening date of the New Waldorf Theatre has been announced for Monday night, March 17. It had been expected to be able to open it at an earlier day, but the extent of the work in preparing the house according to the specifications set down by the owners caused it to be deferred. So when the public views the New Waldorf there will be plenty of chances to marvel at the completeness of the accommodations offered for the proper enjoyment of the bills to be presented, which will be combined vaudeville and photoplays.

NEW CAMBRIDGE THEATRE

When the new Central Square Theatre, Cambridge, which the Gordon interests will operate, throws open its doors St. Patrick's night, Arthur Mantell will be found presiding at the magnificent organ which is said to be the finest ever put in a theatre in New England.

Mr. Mantell was born and brought up in Cambridge, and it is a curious coincidence that he returns to take charge of the music at the first big class picture palace to be erected in his native city.

Mr. Mantell has been organist at the Upham's Corner Strand and his success at that model theatre has led to his transfer to Cambridge.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

The continuity audience attending the daily changes of program of motion picture subjects at Loew's Columbia Theatre is quite gratifying to the management. The growing clientele of the theatre attests how wise was the adoption of this policy.

COMING

"The Rainbow Girl," that colorful, tuneful and merry musical comedy presented by Klaw and Erlanger for an all-too-short stay at the Colonial Theatre last season, will return to the Tremont Theatre for a three weeks' engagement beginning Monday evening, March 24, with the entire original cast and production. The cast includes Billy B. Van, Sidney Grant, Miss Street, Harry Dell, Lenora Novasino, Laura Hamilton, Miriam Medis, Georgia Sewell, Robert E. Pitkin, William Clifton, Marquita Dwight, Fred Solomon, Jane Burby and Margaret Merriman.

The plot of "She Walked in Her Sleep," which had a long and prosperous run of four months at the Playhouse in New York, has to do with the young lady of the above title who walks in her sleep and who simply cannot be made to stay put once she lays her head on her downy pillow. A great deal of the fun is brought about when she glides spookily into the room of a newly wed couple and then ambles out carrying with her a tubs of powerful explosive, which her father has entrusted to the young chemist and his partner for analysis.

The excellent and original cast, exactly like one seen during its long run in New York, will present this farce on the occasion of its production here. In the company are many familiar personalities in Isabel Irving, Helen Lackaye, Eva Williams, Lelia Frost, Marjorie Davis, Robert Ober, Arthur Aylesworth, Walter Walker, Arthur De Lord and Joseph Crehan.

HONOR PRIVATE SOLDIER, SAYS COL. GUTHRIE

Trench Boys Bore Brunt of War, Declares Wounded Hero Just Home

Portland, Me., March 8.—Propped up in his berth on board the hospital ship Essequibo and still suffering from wounds received on the battlefields of France, Colonel Percy A. Guthrie, the first Canadian to volunteer for service in the war and known in New England as organizer and commander of the 236th Overseas Battalion (Maclean Kilties of America) arrived here today.

He was at the first big push made by the Germans at Ypres and only one of four Canadian officers of the 10th Battalion to come out of battle alive and who was made a colonel for gallantry. The colonel was asked: "Who won the war?"

"Some question," said Colonel Guthrie. "But if you mean which nation of the allies I would say that no answer can be given, for what each did was necessary to have achieved victory. If you mean which class of our joint allied citizenship really won the war, I would unhesitatingly say 'the private soldier.' Whether it be the British Tommy, the American doughboy or the French poilu the answer would be the same.

THE "MAN OF THE MUD."

"Whenever we use the word 'victory,' whenever we think of what the word means, our imaginations must necessarily picture before us the grim edge of 'No-Man's-Land' with the solitary 'man of the mud' standing in his trench line home peering out into the nightime darkness, always guarding by his presence there the far-off homes.

"He is the first line of defence in our land force system. He it is who has withstood the brunt' and has taken the hard knocks of the war.

"All could not be generals, all could not be on staffs, all could not be the cavalry John behind the line, so he became the 'private soldier' and he 'carried on.' He lived on cheaper and coarser food, he wore cheaper and coarser clothes, he slept in the mud of the trench or in the dirty billet and he did all the hard and dirty and disagreeable work of all war and got less pay.

"He saw in next-door neighbor at home swank around in an officer's uniform, clothes brushed and boots polished. In camp he saw the officers entertaining their lady friends in the canteen at afternoon tea—the camp was out of bounds to his lady friends except on certain days (once a week).

"He turned in at 'last post,' but often could lie awake long into the night listening to the laughter and singing that came from the officers' mess.

READY FOR ANY DANGER.

"There were no strong drinks sold in the canteen, same being 'no bon' for the soldier, but he knew that cool gin rickeys and tee Scotches were served at the officers' mess.

"Generals, field marshals might peter out or be piled on the scrap-heap of regressive war, but he must remain. He, the private soldier, must remain. He, the private soldier, must remain. He must be there ready to meet the enemy.

"It was with this feeling that he finally went over the top, into that blinding desert of blistering hell, into shell fire and machine gun barrage, into gas and flame, with his steel tipped rifle to meet face to face and deal blow for blow in that great personal conflict which is the crisis in the morals of armies.

"Yes, the private soldier won the war—God bless him."

The colonel is going back to Fredericton, N. B., to his wife and three children. He will remove a sign which he placed on his law office door over four years ago when he volunteered for service in the war. It reads: "Gone for the duration of the war."

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Joseph Malkin, the excellent first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was soloist at the Symphony concert yesterday. He chose the Variations on a Rococo Theme by Tschaikowsky, one of the least inspired works of the great Slav composer, and played with a brilliancy and ardor worthy of a better cause.

Debussy's three Nocturnes were a feature of the afternoon. The first, "Clouds," is a vague formless prelude-like affair, the second, rather more spirited, is called "Festival." It has atmosphere and melodic color, but is hardly a wild revel, a sort of Society of Psychical Research Pink Tea. The third, "Sirens," represents the sea, and rocks, and sirens singing, their mysterious songs. Mr. Stephen Townsend had provided a score of sirens, who were afternoon frocks, sat in front of the orchestra and intoned the wierd vocal harmonies of Debussy very effectively.

The effect of sirens is rather soporific. Witness three old ladies within reaching distance of my seat all slumbering peacefully when it was over. Mendelssohn's melodious Italian Symphony brought the concert to an agreeable conclusion.

The Boston Symphony program for the coming Friday and Saturday (the orchestra to travel during the following week) is marked by a revival—Saint-Saens' little Second Symphony in A minor, unheard at these concerts since the days of Nikisch, and the introduction in this country of a new suite of "Open Air Music" by Florent Schmitt, the more than up-to-date Parisian composer. Another interesting number will be Bach's Concerto in F major No. 2 for violin, flute, oboe and trumpet. Mr. Rabaud has disregarded the "change about" version of Falls Mell'm and restored the music to the master's way. A harpsichord will be used for the accompaniment, played by Charles W. Adams. For the rest, Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Musical Picture," "Sadko," of ballet fame, and Chabrier's glittering and strong-rhythmed "Espagna."

U. S. HOSPITALS REFUSE AID TO EX-PRIVATE

Army Regulations Blamed for Refusal to Treat Old Wound of Discharged Soldier

Army regulations were to blame for the refusal of the Robert Breck Brigham Base Hospital No 10 and the United States Naval Hospital at Chelsea to treat Private Edward J. Sexton of Wakefield, a Chateau-Thierry hero of the 104th infantry, now in civilian clothes.

Colonel Joseph P. Clark, commanding officer of the Robert Breck Brigham institution, gave this explanation of the incident today.

Private Sexton was discharged from the service following the apparent healing of his wound in the abdomen sustained from a bayonet thrust at Chateau-Thierry. Owing to an attack of influenza, Sexton's wound reopened and he sought treatment in an army hospital, from which he had been previously discharged as cured.

Because he was in civilian clothes, and had been honorably discharged from the service, both government hospitals refused to take his case—although the Naval Hospital gave him first-aid treatment.

When the Federal Public Safety Committee and the Wakefield Branch of the Red Cross heard of Sexton's plight they were incensed and sought the reason for refusing Sexton the treatment he required.

In a statement to the American today, Colonel Clark of Base Hospital No. 10, Fenway Hill, Roxbury, said:

"We were obliged to refuse Sexton treatment because, under the army regulations, no person not in the United States Army at the time of application for treatment can legally be admitted to such hospital as ours.

"It seems to me that there ought to be some provision for exceptional cases like that of Private Sexton, but there isn't. The regulations are very explicit on that point.

"By leaving the service, Private Sexton forfeited the right to free treatment at this institution. But there are plenty of other hospitals at which he could secure treatment without charge. We have sent numerous cases such as his to the Boston City Hospital with excellent results. We never have had any trouble in such cases before.

"In fairness to Private Sexton's case is a matter for the War Risk Board or the Vocational Education Board to look out for. Both of those boards are organized to care for the interests of discharged soldiers.

"Except in emergency cases, where we would refuse no one, cases of discharged soldiers are out of our hands, and we have no alternative in the matter."

When the War Risk Board, located in Room 142 of the Kimball building, 15 Tremont street, and the Federal Board for Vocational Education located in Room 433, of the Tremont building, 73 Tremont street, said today that the case of Private Sexton had not been brought to their attention. Both board directors declared, however, that they stood to assist Private Sexton to secure proper surgical treatment, and would render him every necessary care if he would apply either for assistance and counsel.

AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME, FIFTY YOUNGSTERS KEEP WELL BY TAKING FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

Matron Says That During Grip Epidemic She Kept The Children Free From Colds And Grip By Constant Use Of This Wholesome Tonic

"I have 40 or 50 children here at the children's home constantly. During the recent grip epidemic I gave them Father John's Medicine at the least sign of a cold and by this means we kept them out of danger. Only two cases of grip developed and these were promptly relieved by Father John's Medicine. I depend on this old fashioned remedy whenever any of the children have an attack of croup or have a cold or throat irritation. When they are weak or run down I always give them Father John's Medicine to build them up. They all gain rapidly under the treatment the medicine affords.

You are safe when you use Father John's Medicine because you know it is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form. Over 60 years in use.

ROOSEVELT SOUNDS PREPAREDNESS NOTE

New York, March 8.—The American soldiers who have seen war will be strongly in favor of future preparedness, in the opinion of Lieutenant Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who arrived home this week from France. SAYS PILOT LIGHT ADDS HEAVILY TO GAS BILL

Brighton Man Charges Agents Misrepresent Facts When Installing Burners

The Boston American has received a letter of specific complaint from Myron W. Richardson of No. 67 Brookedale road, Brighton, about the CEZ burners sold and installed by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

Mr. Richardson complains particularly about the gas consumption of the pilot lights of the CEZ burners, saying he has found it to be more than 33 times the amount represented to him by the gas company's agent.

He requests that other gas consumers, who feel that they have been misinformed regarding the pilot light cost of CEZ burners, send him statements of their experiences. He desires to inform the Gas and Electric Light Commission in order to establish responsibility of the gas company "for such misrepresentations" by its agents.

EAGER TO FIX BLAME.

His letter reads as follows:

"Some three years ago the Boston Consolidated Gas Company began an active canvass of the city for the purpose of persuading consumers to use the CEZ burners. These burners involve the use of a pilot light, which the agent of the company represented would burn so little gas that it possibly would not be registered by the meter at all, and if registered would not cost over 5 cents per year.

"Ten of these burners were installed in my house. My gas bills almost immediately increased, and after some months I discovered that my meter registered for the pilot lights a consumption of gas very much in excess of the representation made by the agent of the company. The gas company was immediately notified of these facts in January, 1917. All that came of the notification was to change my gas meter. This in no way remedied matters, but removed such evidence as I had accumulated and compelled me to accumulate new evidence on the new meter.

"After securing evidence of this kind upon three different meters, I recently brought the matter to the attention of the Massachusetts Electric Light and Gas Commission for investigation. They report that the latest form of pilot light for the CEZ burners consumes 19-100 cubic feet of gas per hour. As these pilot lights run twenty-four hours a day and 365 days a year, this means a total consumption by each pilot light amount to 1,664 cubic feet per year, which, at the present price would cost the consumer $1.66.

"This is something of an increase over the cost of 5 cents per year as represented by the agent of the company. To be exact, it is slightly more than thirty-three times that representation. At this rate my ten CEZ burners have regularly added between $1.40 and $1.50 per month to my gas bills, or approximately $50 for the three years that they have been in use in my home.

THOUSANDS OF BURNERS USED.

"I am but one consumer out of many thousands. Thousands and tens of thousands of these CEZ burners have been installed in this city. They add hundreds of dollars to the gas bills of consumers, probably without their knowledge. They wastefully consume 1,600 cubic feet of gas per year apiece, and this at a time when conservation is urged as the patriotic duty of every citizen.

"A limited investigation seems to show that similar misrepresentations about these pilot lights were made by other agents of the gas company in other parts of the city. I desire full information upon this point. I would very much appreciate it if other consumers who have been thus misinformed would send me a statement to this effect to my Brighton address.

"I will be glad to bring such information to the attention of the Electric Light and Gas Commission for the purpose of establishing the responsibility of the gas company for such misrepresentations on the part of its agents. The more replies I receive the stronger the case I present.

"In the meanwhile shut off your pilot lights. This will deprive you of their convenience, which was probably a large factor in their installation, but it will reduce your gas bills."

A Boston American reporter found CEZ burners set up for demonstration at the gas appliance salesrooms of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company on West street.

A clerk said that the CEZ burner were put on the market, were sold and were installed by the gas company.

The clerk was asked how much did the pilot light consumed per month His said the pilot light consumption would not amount to more than three cents per month.

(Mr. Richardson states in his letter that, when the burners were installed in his house, the company agent represented that the pilot light consumption would run to not more than a nickel a week.)

The clerk at the salesroom said that the company did not guarantee that the pilot light cost would not run to more than three cents per month.

If Gas Company Is Overcharging, Write to the American

So many glaring inconsistencies in the prices charged for gas in Greater Boston have come to the notice of the American, that this newspaper invites its readers to write to this office if they believe they have been subjected to unjust charges by local gas companies.

These letters should not be merely complaints. They should be accompanied by monthly statements from the company to back up the writers' charges.

GOOD NEWS FOR HUB FANDOM; SCOTT AND NEHF IN LINE

By NICK FLATLEY.

TWO more of Boston's real ball players have come in out of the non-sign wilderness, and the season has approached accordingly just so much nearer. Matters are fifty-fifty as far as our native teams go, for Everett Scott has once more attached himself to the Red Sox and Arthur Nehf is again a brave.

Scotty is the best of the shortstops in the A. L., and just about as necessary to his team as Battering Babe Ruth. Nehf is at least as good a southpaw pitcher as the National circuit knows, and makes the Brave sharpshooting department something to be feared by all enemies.

The great shortstop, who was dissatisfied with the first contract he received, has been placated, and, with the exception of McInnis, the champion infield is all set. Stuffy is having some trouble about the bonus he was promised for playing third last Spring, but we believe he will shortly get it and forward his signature.

This leaves Mister Ruth, the real serious holdout, and as the signs go, he is a regular one. He is convinced he's worth the big money—and he sure is—and he's set to get it. It has been said that he's being wrongly advised and misled by friends, but that's merely an effort to scare him a bit.

Battering Babe does his own baseball thinking, and anyone who knows him the least bit knows also that advice is nothing in his young life. He's a star; realizes it, and has a natural dealre to collect.

Battering Babe Has Started to Hit 'Em.

THE only thing that's really worrying the big hitter is the supply of left-handed drivers and washies. Babe went out yesterday to the Belmont Golf Club with Bert Nicoll, the w. k. pro. He knocked several home runs, and incidentally ruined a coupis of perfectly good clothes.

At the ninth hole, having excavated a few tons of the soggy sward, Babe declared he had never "busted a club." Then he looked at his driver and found the head split. He buzzed and chagrined, he tried a new one on the next tee. He put everything he had in the swing, and the head of the hockey whissed half way to the green.

After Billy Hamilton had recovered, he lent the battling idol a regular club, and Babe proceeded to show that he could hit them just as far right-handed as left—and that's just about as far as Guilford can.

According to Bert N., Ruth has the most natural golf swing a southpaw ever owned, and could make just as good at that game as he has in baseball. Bert knows them all, too. You gotta admit Babe is some athlete.

Donovan Wins Feature Bout With Bergin.

WHILE the world's record for speech was being broken at the weekly Commercial show, the directors managed to sandwich in a few pretty good bouts, and a big crowd, as usual, was perfectly satisfied. The feature bout saw the efficient Johnny Donovan give Charley Bergin of New Haven quite a mean rounding.

Johnny was a bit puzzled at first when his wallops did not stop Bergin from tearing after him, but when he sized things up he hopped in front and never was headed. The New Haven youth is a tough individual, though, and after he had survived three terrific thumps on the jaw in the third, managed to go all the way without showing much distress.

Tommy Flanagan bested Al Wittee in a bout that was more ludicrous than anything else. Wittee showed a snappy left hand in the opening round, but after that was merely waiting for the curtain. He back-handed and did a lot of other things not according to the Marquis of Queensberry, but finally disqualified in the sixth.

The silver tea-rounder came to an untimely end in the ninth, when little Teddy Murphy pinned an accidental foul on Tommy Marks. Up to that time the go had been spicy, with Teddy getting, perhaps, a bit the worst of it. But he didn't try to foul his way out. A swing was merely knocked down by Marks.

The opener saw George Brooks get the decision from Max Murphy in six chapters.

All-Star Card of Bouts for Commercial Club.

MATCHMAKER McDEVITT was on the job bright and early today with his card for next Friday night at the Commercial A. C. Here it is: Tony Marks vs. Teddy Murphy, 10 rounds; Eddie Harcelli vs. Dan McCormack, 10 rounds; and Young Vero vs. Johnny McMinnimen. The show will open with a six-rounder, which will be announced later.

Shevlin in Overseas Title Match March 17

THE following from Able Seaman Billy Henderson, manager of Eddie Shevlin, will tell the latter's friends a few pertinent facts about the naval boxer's immediate prospects:

"The return match between Johnny Bdshan, welterweight champion of England, and Eddie Shevlin of the United States Navy will be held March 17 at the National Sporting Club, London. The first match between this pair was witnessed by the largest crowd at the famous sporting club since pre-war days. Bashan was proclaimed the winner after fifteen rounds of rugged boxing, but Shevlin is certain he can defeat the English champion and promptly went after a return match.

"Manager Bettison of the National Sporting Club has promised to secure Ted (Kid) Lewis to meet the winner early in April. Shevlin is training daily with Eddie McGoorty and Auxie Ratner and will be in perfect condition for the fight."

WEST ROXBURY BOYS BEAT CAMBRIDGE RIVALS

The West Roxbury High School track team defeated Cambridge High and Latin, at Curtis Hall, 48½ to 24½. Boyce's victory in the "600" was the feature of the meet.

Defi to Bowling Teams

Company G, 11th Infantry, State Guard, claimant of the bowling championship of Arlington, is out with a defi to all rivals in the State. Private Henry Finley is manager and Private Warren, captain.

CONGRESS tossed an awful rock at the rock-ballasted roads. Washington figures that seven hundred and fifty million are too many berries to be growing on one bush. Now the railroads threaten to cut out upper berths, jolts, cinders, pump stops and other conveniences.

SOME 1919 DEFINITIONS.

KING: A word in a K-less dictionary.
WISE GUY: A bird who used to lay something away for a wet day. Now lays it away for a dry day.
ANTI: A 5B guy in a 1A world.
REFORMER: A gent with hawk eyes and a canary brain.
SOPA POP: A chaser with nothing to chase.
FILIBUSTERER: A graphophone needle with ears.

FRANK BAKER is still down in Trappe with the alfalfa buttoned up around his ears. Says he would rather stay there and watch the weeds grow than play ball. What's fifteen thousand to a guy who owns an egg ranch or butter orchard?

CAN'T bribe Frank, either. We promised to pick him up a nice fur benny in Childs' overcoat department, but the old boy wouldn't tumble.

IF isn't possible that it is municipal pride that keeps Frank in Trappe. But you can't tell. We know a bird in Onset who thinks the Atlantic Ocean is a branch of the Cape Cod Canal.

NEW manager of Fred Fulton is propagandering the works with pamphlets. He's got the country all littered up with literature. Shows a picture of Fred with a nice yellow border around it. Says that Fred will come back. Claims that the Newark flop was just Fred's way of training for a return fight. Queer way. Rip Van Winkle trained longer than that and didn't lick anybody when he came back. Fred's manager needs a manager himself.

Mathewson Signs as Assistant Manager of the Giants

New York, March 8.—Christy Mathewson, formerly star pitcher of the Giants, for two and a half seasons manager of the Cincinnati club and lately a captain in the Chemical War Service of the A. E. F., has signed as pitching coach and assistant manager of the Giants. Incidentally he is to be groomed to succeed John McGraw as manager of the club.

"It is my intention to step down as manager within the next two or three years," said McGraw in making the announcement. "By that time Mathewson should be ready to take up the club, I will retire to the executive offices."

Matty received his discharge from the army last week.

HUGGINS TALKING OVER MATTERS WITH BAKER

New York, March 8.—Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, is down at that dear Trappe, Md., today talking over terms with J. Franklin Baker, his slugging third baseman. Baker recently announced his permanent retirement from baseball.

Huggins stated before leaving New York that he was prepared to make Baker an offer the home-run king could scarcely afford to turn down and offered to wager $1,000 that he would return bearing his signed contract.

Reckless Mr. Coffey to Box Fulton Out in San Francisco

By TAD.

New York, March 8.—A wire from Frisco informs us that Jim Coffey, the Dublin Giant, is about to depart for the West.

It seems that Billy Gibson has intrusted the affairs of the big Irishman to Jim Griffin, the famous referee, and that Jim is to match Coffey with a sucker out there by the name of Fulton.

This kick Fulton is the lad who beat Langford, Weinert, Moran, Jim Flynn, Willie Meehan and others too numerous to mention.

Why Mr. Coffey didn't join some machine gun company instead of going West to meet Fulton, we can't understand. Fred has had hands we admit. Some say that he has a streak of canary, too, but that's still in doubt.

SCHOOL RELAY MEET ON AT EAST ARMORY

The East Armory was the scene of the first annual carnival of the Massachusetts High School Association. Twenty-seven races were programmed, with senior, intermediate and junior athletes having their inning. Six trial heats were necessary in each division, the heat winners qualifying for the semi-finals.

PRINCE CANTACUZENE ON HARVARD FENCING TEAM

The Harvard and Bowdoin fencing teams were carded to meet this afternoon in Randolph Gymnasium. The Crimson foilsmen were to be Captain Eddie Gay, Sam Ordway and Hoyoi Sone. Prince Michel Cantacusens is the team's first substitute.

Last Night in the Ring

Akron, O.—Johnny Tillman, Minneapolis welterweight, shaded Johnny Griffiths, twelve rounds.

Newport, R. I.—Billy Woods of Manchester, N. H., and Young Burns of Newport, drew, twelve rounds.

Baltimore—Sid Norfolk, negro heavyweight, knocked out Spalding Hogue, heavyweight champion of the navy, fourth round. Jack Johnson defeated Eddie Dorsey, eight rounds.

Jersey City, N. J.—Johnny Clinton, New York lightweight, outpointed Freddie Sexton, eight rounds.

NEW 1,000-YARD MARK AIM OF JOIE RAY

New York, March 8.—Joie Ray, Chicago's remarkable middle-distance runner, is out to do his utmost to establish a new world's record in the 1,000-yard race at the A. A. U. national indoor championships in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, tonight.

Ray has an old score to settle with Tom Campbell, and in addition to this he feels that the University of Chicago wizard is the one man entered in the race who can give him enough competition to force him to break the mark.

Thirteen of the greatest middle-distance runners in America are to go for the 600-yard race, and it would not be surprising to see the world's indoor record of m. 12 2-5s. held by Tom Halpin of the Boston A. A., displaced.

The field includes Marvin Gustafson of the University of Pennsylvania, present national champion; Campbell; Dave Caldwell, of the Boston A. A., winner of the recent Millrose "800"; Tom Halpin, also of the Boston A. A., and holder of the world's 600-yard record; Homer Baker, international half-mile champion and world's record-holder for 660 yards.

Frank Shea of the University of Pittsburgh, who came within a fifth of a second of Meredith's world's record for a quarter mile in winning the Intercollegiate championship at the distance last Spring; J. Howard Berry, formey all-around star of the University of Pennsylvania.

Jack Sellers, Metropolitan half-mile champion; Larry Scudder, national junior half-mile champion in 1916; Arthur Reilly, national junior 600-yard champion; Walter Yowe, Metropolitan junior 440-yard champion, and C. A. Peterson, the former Syracuse University middle distance star.

The race between Halpin, Meredith and Elmer Smith in the "440" portion of the medley will be a treat, to say nothing of the race between Caldwell, Baker, Devaney and Shaw in the half mile "leg."

This will be the last event on the program, which will give these stars sufficient rest after competing in their favorite events earlier in the night.

SCHUPP AND SHAWKEY TO STAY ON OLD JOBS

New York, March 8.—The Giants signed a pitcher today so did the Yankees. Ferdie Schupp, attenuated Southpaw, who was a noisy sensation in the 1917 race, came to terms with Jawn McGraw, while President Ruppert lined up Bob Shawkey, veteran right-hander.

Meet in Wesleyan Tank

Middletown, Ct., March 8.—The Wesleyan and Springfield Y. M. C. A. College swimming squads were to clash in the former's tank here this afternoon.

Tinker Gets' Dixie Walker

Chicago, March 8.—President Mitchell of the Cubs announces the sale of Pitcher Dixie Walker to the Columbus (American Association) club.

CARLSON WHIPS PHINNEY BOYLE IN BUSY GO

By RINGSIDE.

Harry Carlson, Brockton's flatle pride and one of New England's best lightweights, made good in emphatic fashion in his bout with Phinney Boyle, Lowell battler, before the Harrington A. A. in his home city.

Carlson had a distinct shade on Boyle and merited the decision he received from Referee Johnny Lynch at the end of a very busy twelve-rounder.

A variable jam, including goodly sized delegations from Boston and Lowell, turned out for the scrap. In the parlance of the show-shop world, it was a turnaway, several hundred late-comers being denied admission to the club's hall so dchse was the mob inside.

Boyle appeared to be a trifle heavier than Carlson and was easily the stronger boy of the two. If Phinney had indeed slung his destructively as Carlson, he probably would have won. But Phinney contented himself with landing an occasional clean wallop, and letting it go at that, while Carlson hustled every inch, foot and yard of the way.

It was even up to the halfway mark, with Boyle winning the seventh and Carlson clearly outfinishing him. Boyle's supporters figured Phinney had a draw coming, but Lynch's verdict was the proper one.

In the semi-final Freddie Webb of Weymouth, won a merry slugfest from Tommy Corbley. Next Friday night: Terry Brooks vs. Pete Hartley. Oh boy!

Three Harvard Teams Are in Action at New Haven Today

New Haven, Ct., March 8.—There were to be three athletic clashes between Yale and Harvard here this afternoon. The rival varsity wrestling squads were carded to battle, with the freshmen having a go on both on the mat and in the tank.

The varsity wrestling program:

115 Pounds—Gardiner, Harvard, vs. James, Yale.
125 Pounds—Baker, Harvard, vs. Twesley, Yale.
145 Pounds—Captain MacDonell, Harvard, vs. Jones, Yale.
158 Pounds—Anderson, Harvard, vs. Gray, Yale.
Over 158 Pounds—Parsonnet, Harvard, vs. Captain Arvine, Yale.
Heavyweight—Parsonnet, Harvard, vs. Galt, Yale.

Bauer, Sutcliffe, Smith, Stearns, Weatherhead, Macomber and Brown formed the Crimson's 1922 wrestling squad. Their Blue rivals were Page, Marvin, Cairns, Benjamin, entered in both the 145 and 158-pound classes; Bourne and Quaille.

CREW FOR TUFTS WITH PAT MANNING AS COACH

Tufts, for the first time in its history, has issued a call for candidates for a varsity crew. Veterans from the freshman crew of three years ago, and men who have had experience on prep school eights, give the Brown and Blue an opportunity to develop a strong eight. Pat Manning is expected to be named coach.

Harvard, through Graduate Treasurer Moore, has loaned Tufts a shell, and George Brown of the B. A. A. has given the Medfordites the use of the Unicorn boathouse on the Charles. Among the men training candidates are Strochman, '19, and Malone, '19, both members of 1918 freshman crew, and McCaffery, captain of last year's English High crew.

EX-PURPLE INFIELDER PASSES UP SYRACUSE

Syracuse, N. Y., March 8.—Eddie Quigley, former Holy Cross first-baseman, and Speed Lucey, ex-Fordham infielder, who entered Syracuse University a few weeks ago, have departed for parts unknown and are not expected back. Coach Low Carr is pleased with his squad and is hopeful of turning out a winner.

NEVADA FAVORED TO GET JULY 4 TITLE FIGHT

By ED CURLEY

New York, March 8.—There is no doubt that the announcement of the legalizing of boxing in Nevada will cheer up Tex Rickard, for it means he has at least one place where he can stage the Willard-Dempsey championship fight.

It will enable the game promoter to select a spot where the men can travel over a decent limit and to a referee's decision.

It looked dark when Governor Boyle vetoed the original measure, but the passage of the bill over the Executive's veto makes everything satisfactory.

This will suit the sporting world and actually make the event a genuine championship affair.

Since Rickard secured the match he has been very coy at even mentioning the name of Nevada. The possible he figured it would be rather dangerous to discuss this State while the bill was up before the Legislators.

Rickard will not reach this city until tomorrow at the earliest. 'Tis hardly probable he will admit Nevada will be the scene of the big scrap.

He has plenty of time before the final selection and naturally will give the entire country the North and South before proclaiming the site.

Just the same he has an "ace" buried by the action of the Nevada lawmakers.

NEW ENGLAND LEAGUE IS OUT TO GET GOING

Lowell, March 8.—J. H. Farrell of the National Association of Minor Baseball Leagues, has wired John H. Donnelly of this city, awarding him protection for territory covering Lawrence, Haverhill and Fitchburg. This means the little of New England League will probably go it again.

STARS OF GAME VERY SLOW IN SIGNING UP

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

According to latest reports from the major league clubs less than 15 per cent. of the players without holdover contracts have signed. At least 20 per cent. have refused to sign and have become "holdouts."

I have a list of thirty-eight ball players publicly announced as refusing to sign contracts offered them by their teams. There is no way of knowing how many others are in the same situation.

Of these thirty-eight, more than half have stated openly that their salaries were cut and two have declared that the pay offered them was insulting. Nine are demanding increases in salary.

The situation is a curious one in baseball. The fact is that the owners practically are controlling their wages and other expenses.

Another fact is that the cost of living, especially to men who travel and live around hotels, practically forces the players to demand as much if not more than they have been receiving. The two conditions make compromise rather difficult.

The majority of the players realize that there is a necessity for a reduction in salaries and that they either must accept that cut or quite the game for some other business.

Ordinarily club owners pay little attention to the threat of a star ball player to quit. In the first place, they know that not five per cent. of the players can make as much at any other business.

In the second place, they know that a ball player, if he can do so "on the level," will accept a smaller pay. He likes the limelight, the applause and the ease of the life. But this Spring the owners are not feeling quite as comfortable.

They deny cutting salaries. Those denials usually are based on the fact that they offer none players the same rate of pay for a shorter period of time.

The club owners are very largely to blame for the conditions. They have caused most of the trouble by their foolish press agent yarns about big salaries. I accidentally saw a salary list of a major league club two years ago and, if you cut fifty per cent. off the salaries it claimed to be paying it would be more nearly correct.

Question: Shall organized baseball take back the paint-and-putty patriots they accused of being slackers?

This Day in History—March 8, 1919

THIS is the anniversary of the death in 1702 of William III., King of England and Prince of Orange. A great general and a wise statesman, he never won a famous battle, yet defeated his enemies. Weakly all his life, his indefatigable will sustained him in his arduous career.

Learning Astronomy from the Moon

LOOK at the half moon just after sundown tonight and you will perceive that a line drawn through the middle of its convex side points to the sun. Look again when the moon has begun to decline toward the west, and you will see that it has tipped to the right so that the same line slopes downward, still pointing to the sun.

Three Is a Crowd

A NEW PROBLEM IN COURTING

A Young Man Complains Because He Can Never See the Girl of His Heart Without Seeing Her Girl Friend

By Beatrice Fairfax

A SPIRITED letter has just reached me from a young man who is desperately in love, but who feels that he hasn't a fair field.

Inasmuch as he is far from being the only youth in the position he describes, I am going to quote his letter.

"I am twenty-five years old," he writes me, "and have known rather a long series of semi-attractive, more or less pretty young girls who lived at home, were obedient to their parents, did their best to amuse me when I called, and were hysterically enthusiastic over a box of candy.

"I am tired of them.

"But am I any better off because of my present absorbing interest in a girl of another type, inasmuch as this girl is chaperoned and closed in by an arrangement much as no parent ever dreamed of?

"For the first time in my life I am thoroughly in love—and the object of my tormenting affection keeps house with another girl!

"Have you ever tried to break into an enclosure of this sort?

"My friend is twenty-two and a clerk in a lawyer's office. Her people live in Connecticut. She therefore shares a flat with a girl somewhat older than herself, who is in a business office. This may sound like a sensible arrangement.

"But it happens that both these girls have what are called domestic tastes, and they have set up housekeeping together as if it were to be a life arrangement. Their place has a complete equipment, which seems almost ridiculous to me, and (which seems even more ridiculous) they are reluctant to leave it, even for a meal in a lively restaurant.

A Case of Resentment

"But that isn't the worst of it. What maddens me is that it is impossible to see one of them without seeing the other. I go to spend an evening with this girl that I long to know intimately, to breathe my deepest heart secrets to—and the other girl is on the spot every minute.

"I invite her to go to the theatre with me, and she says in her sweet way that she supposes I mean to ask them both, because she doesn't like to leave Clara alone.

"Is there any way of eliminating the highly unnecessary Clara? Or shall I have to propose to both of them in order to marry the girl I must have and cannot live without?"

I have encountered a great many cases of resemblance to this one of young men who considered themselves thwarted by the partnership arrangements that girls form out of town and it so convenient to make.

The resentment amuses rather than disturbs me, because I think in every case I understand it better than the young man himself.

A man who hopes to marry a girl naturally wishes to offer her as much as possible. Above all things, he regards it as his traditional right to offer her "a home of her own." A home that is literally her own and not her parents' and where she can exercise her own tastes and freely arrange her own manner of life.

So that naturally it's disconcerting to find the girl of your choice already supplied with her own home and thoroughly contented with it. It leaves the youthful lover with nothing to offer her but himself. It really does put him at a disadvantage. And that is often, I think, at the bottom of his resentment.

The Girl with Ideas

There's no question but that the girl who is unhappy at home or uncomfortable in a hall bedroom is likely to make better terms with her suitor, is likely to marry him earlier and more willingly than she girl who lives in docestic freedom and contentment.

A youth whose heart inclines toward a girl of this sort has got to win on his own merits—and we are all reluctant to do that.

As to the continual, the seemingly ineradicable presence of the second girl, she is a mere partner, who doesn't understand that it isn't she who is being called on and who simply won't take a nap or creep into the closet, we can easily understand how infatuated swains make a bogey of her and of her being-in-the-way-ness.

But she isn't as formidable as she is painted. And a very simple device for engaging her attention during your courtship would be to bring a man friend with you. This is, in fact, so very simple that it would occur to any youth who wasn't so jealous that he was unwilling to introduce any unfamiliar man within the range of his own loved one.

For youth so enslaved by infatuation and jealousy and suspicion I am afraid no simple, practical counsels are available. And I hope very much that the author of the letter I have quoted doesn't find himself in this extremity.

If he is still sane enough to listen to reasonable arguments, there are certain points of which I should like to remind him.

One is that he is much to be congratulated in having progressed from the stay-at-home young girl who is still a charming child to the self-supporting young woman who has ideas and abilities and character. This is the sort of girl who can be a friend, comrade, sweetheart and wife to a man. She's the kind who makes marriage a sweet and varied and usually successful adventure. She's the kind of girl whom you ought to be glad you're in love with.

And what if you don't always find her sitting alone in the parlor, waiting, as the old-fashioned girl used always to be found? What if she has her own interests and her own congenial companion? Have you really anything to complain of so long as you are free to call on her whenever you like?

It's quite true that the presence of another girl prevents your making love to the girl who so greatly attracts you. But you know quite well that after all you have as yet no right to make love to her. So is that a legitimate grievance?

After all, I suspect that in his heart my correspondent admires his friend for her capacity to lend the very kind of aid that he confesses to find fault with. And I have no doubt that, in spite of her chaperoned state, when the time arrives for him to tell her that he hopes to marry her, he'll need no counsel whatever as to the direct and persuasive way to do it.

Anecdotes of the Famous

A conversation on aviation between Botticelli and Leonardo da Vinci is given by A. J. Anderson in his book, "The Romance of Sandro Botticelli, Woven from His Paintings." Botticelli observed his great contemporary purchase some birds from a dealer in order to liberate them, and he congratulated him on his compassion—

"'Watch!' said he gravely, loosing a captive mavis. See! The thrushes and other small birds are able to make headway against the course of the wind when they fly in spurts; they first take a long course by dropping in a slanting direction towards the ground, with their wings half closed; then they open their wings, catching the wind in them with the reverse movement, and so rise to a height; and then they drop again.'

"'This is most interesting,' answered Sandro, with his eyes twinkling.

"'Believe me, Sandro, that I am serious! Of course, our bird should have no other model than the bat, since we must bind together the framework of our wings with a membrance like that of a bat, and not with feathers that are separated from one another so as to allow the air to pass through them; in fact, I am at present engaged in dissecting a bat and studying it carefully, as the model for our machine.'

"'Therefore you study the flight of birds?'

"'Certainly; For a bird is an instrument working according to mathematical laws, which instrument it is possible for man to reproduce with all its movements, but not with a corresponding degree of strength; and so consequently I am studying chiefly the movements of the greater birds which glide, and the manner in which they overcome and make use of the air currents.'"

When a Girl Marries

A New Serial of Young Married Life Told in Interesting Style

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

Copyright, 1919, by the King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"THAT was a most excellent dinner Nora McGinnis cooked for us, Terry. I'm mighty glad we had it—and this little visit, for I won't see you folks again in a hurry," remarked Betty as we all strolled into the big living room at Noroton.

Our host, Anthony Norreys, gave Betty a little nod of understanding, and with another chummy little nod he given me to understand that I was to have the honor of pouring the after-dinner coffee. But Terry flashed round at Betty.

"You're off again?" he asked resentfully.

"Yes—the Vocational Education people need me once more," replied Betty with a trace of uneasiness.

"That's the work for rehabilitating war-cripples and finding them jobs, isn't it?" asked Anthony Norreys with great interest and no self-consciousness.

"Betty—why didn't you tell me?" exclaimed Terry. "I'd have arranged for a trip at the same time. You know I can make things easier for you. This work takes enough toll of you without your having to book your own trains and hotel rooms. I must plan to get off directly you do."

"Please—don't, Terry," said Betty in a colorless voice, "I go tomorrow. This is my job—you can't take—all my hurdles for me. You have a few of your own, my friend."

"Betty, I want to make things easier for you," pleaded Terry as if to be had forgotten a word there.

We had our moment of understanding, and then Anthony Norreys found a way of breaking the painful silence of the moment.

"And what war work are you doing, Mrs. Harrison?" he asked.

Instantly Jim capitulated into the conversation.

"None—thank fortune!" said he. "All these untrained women rushing into the limelight of 'war work' and letting a little notoriety and a few compliments from their exbatcher go to their head! Lord, if men turn their heads! Jove, it's sickening! Anne's place is at home."

"Jim—behave-boy!" I scolded, "I didn't know you felt this way. I couldn't guess. I thought of course you'd like me to help. And the very day you came out here I went to the committee and signed up for canteen work."

Jim straightened up in his chair. Then he rose and limped over to me. There was a cutting, menacing quality in his voice.

"Indeed! And you chose to hide this from me. Now, may I ask why you suddenly decided to take my friends into your confidence at the same time that you condescend to inform me?"

"Jim," be an idiot, Jim!" cried Betty sharply. "Anne was so interested in your big job that she forgot to bother you with her little one. And if Tony hadn't assailed her with the direct question I daresay she'd have gone on forgetting until her first call came."

"Thanks for your clear explanation of Anne's motives. You and she have always understood each other so well that I feel you are an authority on her mental processes. Perhaps you can tell me why she found it necessary to take my affairs for herself now that you've given her time to make up a reasonable story?"

A Confession of Anne's

"Jim, I was a goose, which seems to be a specialty of mine," I said. "But when I saw you plugging away at accounting—oblige Terry—and because you'd been told that you could release a man for the war—I just had to do something, too. And I wanted to come to you in my uniform and surprise you. I thought—I might look—nice. And I hoped you'd like seeing me ready to do a mite where you'd done so much. Then—just now, when Mr. Norreys asked me—I couldn't—lie."

I couldn't keep a choke out of my voice as I ended. I wobbled along the edges and broke . . . And almost before I had finished Jim caught my hand in his and turned to face the room.

"Folks, I don't see why you should forgive me—but I reckon you're all such good friends and good sports that you will," he said with his most winning smile. "I'm only half a man these days—and that half's tired—but that's no use acting like a brute to the dearest wife and the most loyal friend any man ever was blessed with—"

Anthony Norreys interrupted him: "It's I who am to blame, lad. If I hadn't gone a-bungling in with my forward question, the little girl might have had her secret—and your surprise. But you'll all forgive me when I tell you the reason I asked was to beg permission to help Mrs. Harrison's work if there's need for a bit of cash from a disabled old codger. Do you suppose I can arrange to feed a boy or two who hasn't the price of a meal?"

"Oh, how wonderful!" I cried—and for the moment in the light of Mr. Norrey's kindness I forgot the humiliation Jim had made me endure.

A Gardener at Ninety-five

Mrs. Thomas Edwards, of Ohio, Planning to Plant a Victory Garden This Year, as She Did Last

To Mrs. Thomas Edwards, of Oberlin, Ohio, goes the credit of being the oldest active gardener in the United States. She was a war gardener and now, although she has just passed her ninety-fifth birthday, is planning a garden this Spring as usual. She will be one of the great army of Victory Gardeners enlisted for home food production by the National War Garden Commission of Washington. The slogan is "Food f. o. b. the kitchen door," and Mrs. Edwards knows the value of that slogan, for she brought her love for gardening with her from Wales nearly sixty years ago.

Mrs. Edwards firmly believes that you not only find food but long life in a garden. You will also find contentment and the joy of making things grow. Mrs. Edwards has a great deal of pleasure every year in presenting her sons, grandsons and great-great-grandsons with some canned delicacy for Thanksgiving dinner.

Housewives Who Dared

A New Interesting Home Series

By Loretto C. Lynch

"TWAS said that some of her remote ancestors founded the city in which she lived, but we find her just an ordinary little home-maker, who has to match every penny to make ends meet. The home was neat and clean and prettily furnished. There was nothing costly—just well chosen furnishings, well cared for by a woman who cared.

There was Mrs. Penn and Mr. There were three little ones and one girl old enough to go to work. Mr. Penn was a good man and did all he could to keep a comfortable home for his wonrig little family.

But this time when they balanced accounts there was a shortage of almost $50. First little Marin became ill, then it was James. But Father's salary went right on while the kiddies were ill, and after three weeks they recovered.

Perhaps it was worry and staying up every night with the little ones that weakened Father Penn's constitution, and perhaps it was harder work on a war limited diet, but very soon after the children recovered Mr. Penn was stricken. After a week the little family began to draw upon its small savings. After the fourth week the savings all gone, the Penns were in debt. They were in debt about $50.

It was after Mr. Penn's recovery that Mrs. Penn got an idea. For she was too proud to remain in debt long. One day she was embroidering, as usual, when Mrs. Coomes dropped in.

"Why, Mary," Mrs. Coomes exclaimed. "What is it; a luncheon cloth?" And before Mrs. Penn's busy fingers had time to stop and think, Mrs. Coomes went on. "It is a beauty—wits it wer' mine. I'd know where to sell it, and I know I'd get enough for it to give myself a little vacation at the shore."

So embroidery was worth money! It was early in December and Mrs. Penn had been embroidering for eleven months. She had intended these as gifts for her friends. Yet could she who was in debt afford to give presents to any one? The local moving-picture house ran a slide announcing the forthcoming sale to be held in Mrs. Penn's own parlor on December 15. For this advertisement she paid five dollars. What did Mrs. Penn exhibit?

One of the unusual things was a mosquito net hung on a frame. Exquisite blue birds were embroidered in silk on a linen mesh. This brought twelve dollars from the aunt of a lucky new-born.

There were handkerchiefs, too. Those for men were beautifully hemstitched. A few hand initials embroidered upon them. These brought seventy-five cents and a dollar apiece. There were two baby cabin robes. These had quite a bit of eyelet work and were finished with dainty ribbon bows.

There were luncheon cloths and luncheon sets. An embroidered bandeau doily brought $40.

When the cost of the advertisement and materials was subtracted, Mrs. Penn found she had cleared a little more than $100.

It cleared the debt. Mrs. Penn took orders for over a hundred dollars' worth more to be delivered throughout the year.

The second year she cleared almost $200. Now two department stores keep her employed almost all year monograming linens.

House Gowns for Spring

By Rita Stuyvesant

IN the Spring when the grass is beginning to turn green, and dainty flowers are just budding, every woman catches the spirit and turns her thoughts from warm Winter apparel to soft, lovely, feminine things. Even inside the home the spirit is reflected in the pretty new house gowns that are being worn while one is busy at household tasks. To be presentable at all times is the duty of every housewife, even if one's neighbors only drops in to borrow the new cook book.

A house gown of comfortable cut is always welcome in a woman's wardrobe. House gowns this spring are shown not altogether "negligee," and in dainty coloring and finished by clever detail. Many slipon models are shown not altogether "negligee," and yet quite different from the well-known, tailored house-dress of gingham.

Fine silk and cotton mixture crepe has a genius for being fashioned into becoming house gowns. A lovely combination is tan crepe double crossed in pale blue and plentifully sprinkled with small flowers of coral color. Three inch ruffles of a self material wore the short sleeves, this lovely gown flared to a two-yard width around the bottom. The ruffle finished the deep V-neck, sleeves and bottom of the garment. Tiny hems, almost invisible, edged the frills, which were set on with a beading about a half-inch deep. To hold in the fullness at the waistline there was a long string girdle of the material looped in front.

This becoming gown of homey loveliness would be delightful to slip on during those feminine moments when one's uniform is laid aside, and yet when one must be prepared for the unexpected visitor. It is also unusually comfortable as a working dress and has the advantage of being easily laundered.

The Heart Breaker

A PRESENT DAY AMERICAN ROMANCE

Interesting Story of Love at Cross Purposes of Two Sisters and a Man

By Virginia Terhune Van de Wtare

CHAPTER XLV.

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

IF Arthur Bruce noticed any change in his fiancee's manner during the next few days he made no mention of it. Relations between two persons who see each other constantly cannot long remain at high tension, and as days passed matters with the engaged pair seemed to become normal once more.

Indeed, other and more important things than a girl's whims were uppermost in Arthur's mind. The Bruce Contracting Company had been hard hit by the war. Each week added fresh perils to the business affairs of father and son. Building was at a standstill. For such work as was on hand there were not enough skilled laborers, and the prices these few demanded made the hiring of them almost prohibitive. Materials, always an industrial centre, was now going in for the making of munitions. Machine shops, trained workmen of all kinds—who had hitherto looked with disdain upon "the factory hands"—now found it profitable to desert their legitimate trades and enter the mills.

At times it appeared as though the Bruce Contracting Company and its founder must go under in the storm of changing conditions sweeping across the land.

Arthur's father looked twenty years older than before the declaration of war. All color had left his cheeks, and his ashy face his deep eyes looked tired. Yet his son rather not prevail upon him to slacken his unavailing efforts. To late Arnold Bruce was trying to adopt modern methods. The business that he himself had started years ago meant more to the founder than ever Arthur could dream.

A Long, Hard Task

Early and late father and son worked—cutting here, skimping there—endeavoring desperately to keep the frail craft afloat and ahead.

Months slipped by and Arthur himself grew lean and haggard, but, as he explained to Mildred when he was calling on her one evening, he was learning the business thoroughly.

"You cannot accuse me of being a loafer anymore, Honey," he said half laughingly. "The country may have had to declare war before I woke up and went to work, but I certainly am hard at it now. I suppose it's good for me."

"I wonder why you don't"—began Mildred. Then she stopped abruptly, but with such a significant expression of countenance that Arthur felt uncomfortable.

"Why I don't what?" he demanded.

"Oh, nothing," she said, then added with apparent irrelevance, "Tom Chandler will be here soon. He has a furlough, and is coming home for a few days."

"How do you know that?" Arthur asked sharply.

"Why," she hesitated, "someone mentioned it to me. Does it matter so much?"

She did not think it worth while to confess to him that a postcard from her former admirer had brought her this news.

"Why, of course it doesn't matter in a way," Arthur acknowledged.

"I do not mean to speak crossly, dear, but I'm tired and unreasonable tonight — and that Chandler chap always did get my goat. He has the faculty of rubbing me the wrong way, I guess."

"He's gone to war, anyway," Mildred remarked impersonally, "so there is some good in him."

Arthur Resents Her Words

Arthur's face flushed and he bit his lip. When he spoke he steadied his voice by a visible effort.

"Just what do you mean by that remark, Milly?"

"Oh, Arthur," the girl protested irritably, "don't be so touchy! I only meant that whether you, or I or anyone else liked Tom or not, there must be some good in him or he wouldn't have enlisted as soon as we entered the war. Please don't be on the lookout for a chance to quarrel, dear."

She used terms of affection so rarely that her betrothed was touched when she did. He took her hand now and kissed it.

"I didn't mean to be cross," he apologized again. "I am a crab tonight, but I have had a hard day and am worried."

"About that old business," she accused.

"No, not only that," he corrected. "It's about father. He had an attack of vertigo in the office this afternoon. He has had several of these lately, and he's not at all well."

"Probably the vertigo was caused by indigestion," Mildred suggested lightly, and began to talk of other things.

Two days later, as Honora entered the house on her return from the office, the telephone bell rang, and she hastened to answer it.

"Hello, angel girl!" were the words that greeted her astonished ears. "Have you got over your mad, and are you glad to hear my dulcet tones?"

"There must be some mistake," Honora said coldly. "You have the wrong number."

"Isn't that Mildred?" came the query.

"This is the Brent house," Honora replied. "This is Honora Brent speaking."

"Oh, Miss Brent, how do you do?" the voice asked. "This is Tom Chandler. Is Mildred there?"

"Tom Chandler!" Honora exclaimed in surprise. "No, Milly is not. You—you mean Mildred!" corrected as she ran down the stairs and snatched the receiver from her sister's hand. "Hello, Tom!" she called.

Honora walked into the library, and, picking up the evening paper, tried to become interested in the news of the day. But she could not shut out from her ears the excited laughter and talk which followed greeted the remarks of the returned soldier. Honora was at a loss to understand the situation. For weeks past she had comforted herself with the belief that Mildred and Tom were no longer on friendly terms.

Took the Hint

They were walking under a very little umbrella. He was modest and seemed to be nervous, and she finally remarked with a sweet smile:

"Charlie, I'll carry the umbrella, if you will let me."

"Oh, no, I can carry it."

"Yes, Charlie; but, you see, your arm takes up so much room that one side of me is out in the wet."

"I know, dear; but what will I do with my arm? Won't it be in the way all the same?"

"I don't know, Charlie. Tom Clark always knows what to do with his arm when he is under an umbrella with Mary Martin, because Mary told me so."

Going Back a Bit

A crowd had gathered at the bar of the Cock and Countess, and several of the company were swopping yarns.

An old soldier was boasting of his long service, and in doing so drew the long bow somewhat.

"Why," he said, "I was in Julius Caesar's bodyguard. It was while I was at school I got my goat. He has the faculty of rubbing me the wrong way, I guess."

"He's gone to war, anyway," Mildred remarked impersonally, "so there is some good in him."

Skinny Isn't So Very Sad Over Shrimp's Departure

Stocks Strong on All Exchanges; Trading Very Active

U.S. STEEL SELLS AT HIGHEST FOR YEAR

Market Broad and Brisk From the Start Until the Finish

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong today both in New York and Boston, and it was one of the most active stock-end sessions known on the former exchange in many months. Transactions in the first half hour totalled nearly 225,000 shares. Trading was remarkable for breadth. Steels were the leaders. U. S. Steel sold at its highest for the year and as most of the transactions in this issue were for small lots public participation on a large scale was indicated.

Total shares of stocks today were 664,800 shares, bonds $6,548,000. Total sales of stocks for the week were 4,331,300 shares, bonds $25,714,400.

STEELS AT YEAR'S HIGHEST.

Many other issues sold at their highest for 1919 to date. They included Bethlehem B, Crucible, Midvale, Reynolds Steel, Baldwin, American Locomotive, Industrial Alcohol, General Motors, American Smelting, Inspiration, Anaconda and American Agricultural Chemical. After opening unchanged, United Cigar Stores advanced to a new highest record price. Among specialties, Agricultural Chemical was a feature both for activity and strength. Oil issues were a class to lag on the advance, while railroads were quiet after the start. New Haven was the most active. Inspiration was the most prominent copper. There was extensive trading in Baldwin.

CLOSING GAINS IN NEW YORK.

Gains were held as a rule until the market closed, although profit taking increased near the end of trading. The market had a strong and very active finish with U. S. Steel showing a point gain at 97, its highest for the year. Other gains included: Republic, 1¾ at 81; Crucible, 2 at 93½; Midvale, 3¾ at 66¼, Bethlehem B, 2¾ at 69¾, Baldwin, 4⅛ at 97⅛, Am. Locos, 1¾ at 62; Inspiration, 1 at 47⅝; Utah, 1¾ at 72½, and Reading, 1¾ at 84¾.

TRADING HERE WAS ANIMATED.

There was more animation to the Boston market, although business did not show such a relative increase in volume as in New York. Among the most active stocks on the local exchange were New Haven, Agricultural Chemical and Swift. The two named sold at their highest record for the year. United Fruit also sold at its highest record and was among the strongest issues. There was considerable business in Ventura. Coppers were stronger. Nevada-Utah-Consolidated preferred was the only issue pressed to sell on the morning.

Closing gains included: United Fruit, 1¾ at 165½; Swift, 2 at 120½; New Haven, 2 at 34¼; Agricultural Chemical, 2 at 105; Boston & Maine, 1 at 53; Alaska, 1 at 41; Utah Copper, 1 at 71¾, and Old Dominion, 1 at 34. Stewart was unchanged at 33¾, while Massachusetts Electric preferred was off ¼ at 11.

MARKET STRONG AT START.

Prices continued to advance when the market opened. Demand was from all quarters, many buying orders having been forwarded over night from all parts of the country. As usual, the upturn brought the public in. Sentiment was strongly bullish. It had almost remarkably since Congress adjourned. Judge Gary's remarks on steel manufacturers and reports that banking interests are prepared to finance railroads had much to do with the change. Rails went up in the opening, Reading showing the most improvement. Shipping issues were the strongest group. There were good gains for a number of specialties, including Kelly-Springfield. United Cigar Stores sold at a new highest record price.

STOCKS IN SMALL SUPPLY.

It soon found that prices were above at current quotations and the supply was exhausted so quickly as to cause comment. Bears are said to account for an upward movement of such magnitude, but the old contract selling so low that mining companies are reducing dividends, when a reduction of wages is expected, when the army of the unemployed is reported to be 2,000,000 and when cables report famine spreading in Europe. But the offset to all this is confidence that Judge Gary's prediction that the country is facing its most prosperous era is about to be realized. There is uncertainty in all stocks, however, to early next week begin. Much depends upon the conclusion of peace formalities and what aid can be rendered by the government.

The receipts from January 1 to March 6, inclusive, were 26,458,812 pounds against 78,935,326 pounds for the same period last year.

Steel Ingot Production.

February production of steel ingots amounted to 2,686,012 gross tons. Of this total 2,026,983 were open hearth, 655,206 of Bessemer and 5,842 were all grades. Production in January was 3,082,457 gross tons, of which 2,325,802 were open hearth, 748,246 were Bessemer and 7,779 all others. In February last year that total production was 2,378,741 gross tons.

COPPER METAL SOLD IN BIG TONNAGE

25,000,000 Pounds Disposed of at 15 Cents a Pound Recently

Sales of copper metal within ten days by leading interests at around 15 cents a pound are estimated to aggregate 25,000,000 pounds, while sales at 14½ cents are figured at a total of between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 pounds, but found no such supply at so low a price. Small metal dealers are said to be offering copper at 14½ cents delivered. One sale at 14½, is reported. Such transactions are of too small tonnage to affect the situation to any extent.

In New York it is stated that there is expected a substantial buying movement in about a month, believing that there has been a change for the better.

According to a cablegram to a local financial publication there has been a surprising increase reported in the amount of government owned copper in the United Kingdom. From December 19, 1918, to March 1, this year, the stock increased from 61,667,200 to 112,675,520 pounds. In this connection it is remarked:

"When it is considered that today England has in stock a tonnage of copper equal to over 32 per cent. of her pre-war (1913) annual imports, over 215 per cent. of her imports of 1918 and practically the same amount of spelter she received that year, some conception of the financial condition of the British metal markets may be had."

AMERICANS MUST RELY UPON HOME MARKETS

When S. R. Guggenheim of the American Smelting & Refining Co. returned from Europe and was asked about conditions abroad he said:

"What American business men must learn is to build up a domestic market with their products and also try to firmly establish themselves in neutral countries. This should be their first effort and effort instead of depending upon Europe as an outlet for their goods.

"Europe is sick, very sick, and while reconstruction will mean big demands for products of all sorts this will not develop for some time to come.

"Another thing for Americans to learn is that they are not wanted abroad as they were in the days of travelers. Europe is not ready for them and will not be for some time. Prices are high in Europe and the disagreeable and conditions in general are not conducive to comfort or pleasure."

ELEVATED RECEIPTS FOR FEBRUARY SHOW A GAIN

For February this year, compared with the corresponding 1918 month, gross receipts from fares of the Boston Elevated increased 4.43 per cent., the largest monthly gain yet recorded. A year ago the fare was five cents and February receipts totalled $1,342,984, compared with $1,402,500 under the eight-cent fare of this year. The increase is $612,646. During February this year 24,000,000 passengers, 1,000,000 passengers, compared with 27,347,167 passengers in February, 1918. The decreased 2,467,239, or 9.02 per cent, for the month when the eight-cent fare was in force.

A local financial publication prepared the following table to show the changes in gross receipts for the past fourteen months:

	1919	Inc.	1918	Dec.

FOE USED ALUMINUM IN MAKING SHELLS

President Stephen Birch of the Kennecott Copper Corporation has returned from France, where he visited the scenes of American victories. He said:

"We learned that the Germans used aluminum instead of copper in making fuses for many of their ammunitions, while the Allies, which ordinarily have copper bands were strengthened by zinc bands."

MASS MEETING CALLED OFF AT LAWRENCE

Strikers Yield "Under Protest" to Warnings of Police Against Assemblage

Lawrence, March 8.—Strikers today called off the mass meeting scheduled for this afternoon. This action was taken by the general strike committee "under protest," it was announced by leaders.

The withdrawal of the strikers from their attitude of defiance toward the police is regarded by Lawrence authorities as showing that the strikers are weakening. Up to the hour of meeting, this forenoon leaders had stoutly maintained that they would hold the scheduled meeting in the face of the warning by the police. This morning every strike leader received by mail a notice to that effect from Police Commissioner Peter Carr.

Leaders denounced the police action as "wanton denial of our rights of free speech and assemblage."

A statement was issued by Russian leaders, urging that they be permitted to emigrate. Russia is referred to as "our own country, where the glorious dawn of freedom shines brightly, where the working class are masters of their own destiny, where the sons of working class freedom everywhere in the air."

They protest against the terms "aliens" and "foreigners," applied to them, and declare that they converted their "hard-earned money into Liberty Bonds, some of us willingly and some of us under compulsion."

Copies of the document will be submitted to immigration officials at Boston and New York, it was stated.

TO HOLD CONFERENCE ON RAIL MONEY NEEDS

A number of New York bankers will go to Washington on Tuesday next to confer with Director-General Hines on the financial problems of the railroad administration. The conference will be attended also by the entire standing committee of the Association of Railway Executives.

"It is a general way," it is stated in New York, "it has been agreed to divide necessary financing between the banks and the War Finance Corporation.

Negotiate Loan of $337,500,000 for Railroads

New York, March 8.—A possible catastrophe growing out of the failure of Congress to provide for railroad financing has been averted through an agreement at a conference with leading Wall Street men by Eugene Meyer, chairman of the War Finance Corporation.

It was agreed that the necessary financing for the strong railroads will be arranged directly by the banks. The War Finance Corporation, which has available some $337,500,000 for direct loans and which has power and available means of raising needed money in other ways, will render necessary assistance to the weaker railroads.

At the conference were representatives of the Morgan banking house, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, the National City Company, the First National and the Chase Securities Company and the Bankers' Trust Company.

PROBABLE PRICE CUTS FOR STEEL PRODUCTS

In regard to a cutting of steel prices by manufacturers, it was said in Pittsburgh today that reduction of prices ranging from $14 a net ton in finished steel products, $8 to $10 a gross ton on unfinished steel and $ to $5 a gross ton on pig iron production would place finished steel prices at 66 per cent. above the two-year average and 21 per cent. below government level of last year.

It was also stated that steel consumers have had no determined policy of prices at which they would come into the market and the feeling has been growing that, given encouragement, buyers would not hold off as long as has been expected.

OFFICIAL HELPS SOLVE TAX PUZZLES

Revenue Collector Malley Tells What to Include and What Not to Include in Returns

To include or not to include, that is the question which is vexing most prospective income taxpayers as the final day for filing federal income tax returns draws nigh.

Collector of Internal Revenue John F. Malley in the Little Building today made clear exactly what kinds of income must be reported, and emphasized the fact that military or naval forces for active service, up to $5,500, are exempt on allotments or any State or political sub-division of a State, such as a city, county, town or village, and especially every dollar of pay received during 1918. The following items must be reported.

MUST REPORT THESE ITEMS.

Salaries, wages and commissions for personal services, including bonuses.

Interest received on notes, and deposits in banks, including savings banks.

Dividends on stock, whether received in cash or stock. Only dividends paid out of earnings or profits accrued since March 1, 1913, are taxable, but dividends are deemed to be distributed out of the most recently accumulated earnings.

Profits resulting from purchases and sales of property, real or personal, if the property was acquired before March 1, 1913, the profit is based on the difference between the selling price and the fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913.

Profit from stock market transactions.

Income received from fiduciaries—that is, amounts received from income of estates, trusts, etc., through trustees, administrators or executors.

Net partnership profits, whether divided or distributed or not.

Royalties from mines, oil and gas wells, patents, copyrights and franchises.

THESE ARE NOT TAXABLE.

The following items are not taxable and need not be included in the return:

Property received as a gift or by will or inheritance. It must be understood, however, that the income derived from such property is taxable.

Proceeds of life insurance policies.

Returns of premiums on life endowment and annuity policies.

Interest on securities issued under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act of July 17, 1916.

Amounts received through accident or health insurance, or under workmen's compensation acts, plus the amount of damages received, whether by suit or agreement on account of such injuries or sickness.

Amounts received during the war by a person in the military or naval forces for active service, up to $5,500.

Interest on obligations of any State or political sub-division of a State, such as a city, county, town or village, or the District of Columbia. Interest on obligations of the United States is exempt, except that interest on obligations issued after September 1, 1917, is exempt only to the extent provided in the Liberty Loan Acts.

Interest on Liberty Bonds to the par value of $5,000 is exempt from all taxation. Holders of large amounts of Liberty Bonds are advised to consult their bankers or collectors of internal revenue as to their interest exemptions.

Steel Talk on Wednesday

Death Rate at Army Camps in U. S. Shows Drop

Washington, March 8.—"The health of the troops in the United States continues very goodly," says Surgeon-General Ireland's report on health conditions for the week ended January 28.

The death rate for disease during that week among the troops in this country was 9.6 as against 9.8 the preceding week. The rate for the week of February 28 of last year was 6.6. There were 197 deaths from all causes the week of February 28 last as against 119 the preceding week.

The sick and death rate will continue to be relatively high as the troops are further demobilized, as fully two million more are discharged. Another factor that will contribute very considerably high rate here is the constant influx of sick and wounded to this country from overseas.

Pneumonia is increasing in the American Expeditionary Forces, 1,500 new cases having been reported for the week, as compared with 1,239 for the preceding week.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Proposed World Government Would Destroy Democracy

The proposed constitution of the League of Nations would destroy democracy.

The world government it would erect would not be a government of the peoples, by the peoples, for the peoples.

It would be a government of the peoples, by the governments, for the governments.

There is no provision for elections, for referendums, for any expression of the people's will; no recognition at all of the right of any people to instruct their government how to act.

Instead, a council of governments decides what any and every people on earth must do—whether they must make economic war or military war, or espouse one side or the other side.

The people in every country would have absolutely no voice at all in their own government.

Now, that would not be democracy. That would be autocracy of the worst possible kind, autocracy which would make the overthrown autocracies look democratic by comparison.

Put in force, such a system of arbitrary government of the whole world by an Executive Council controlled by five members, four of whom would inevitably be appointed by the governments in power and not elected by their peoples, and there is no such thing as democracy left in the world.

Instead of having made the world safe for democracy we shall have destroyed democracy.

There never was on earth a more tyrannical government than the oligarchy which ruled Venice for centuries—the Council of Ten, of which the proposed Executive Council of the League of Nations is almost an exact copy.

We challenge any supporter of this scheme of universal government by an Executive Council of GOVERNMENT APPOINTEES to show one single recognition of the cardinal principle of democracy in the whole proposed constitution of the League.

The cardinal principle of democracy is the right of any people TO RULE THEMSELVES according to the will of the majority, freely expressed at the ballot boxes and ascertained by a count of votes.

Without this power to decide any and all questions of public concern by their votes, either indirectly by electing representatives or directly by initiative and referendum elections, no people can exercise sovereignty over themselves or can be a democracy.

That is self-evident.

Yet this proposed constitution makes no provision for submitting the most important question any people can decide—the question of war or peace—to the vote of any people on earth.

On the contrary, it expressly deprives every people of any voice in such a decision.

If this document should be subscribed to by us then a majority of the Council, consisting of one British government appointee, one French government appointee and one Japanese government appointee, could put the United States into a war with another country without the consent of the people of the United States and without even consulting the wishes of the people of the United States!

We say that this is a monstrous proposition, and that it is impossible that we can remain a free people, governed only by our own consent, if we agree to any such proposal.

There is no provision for the ELECTION of members of this Executive Council.

There is no provision for the submission of any question this Executive Council may decide to the vote of any PEOPLE.

There is no provision by which any people can register their DISSENT from a decision of this governing Council.

The only method by which any people can dissent from the arbitrary rulings of this autocratic Council would be by refusing obedience to it and backing up the refusal with armed force.

There is not a trace of recognition of any kind of the democratic principle or form of government by elected representatives, subject to the will of the people themselves.

The dominion of the whole world is turned over to the irresponsible and autocratic will of five men, not one of whom is elected by any people or who can be recalled by any people, or who is responsible to his people or to any other power, except the ruling government which appoints him to be one of the Governors of the World.

We say again that a place in such an unelected, undemocratic and irresponsible oligarchy as that is no place for a free, democratic, self-governing people.

We do not believe that the free-born people of the United States will ever consent to surrender their democratic liberties, their republican government, and their sovereign right to be ruled only by their own free consent and the express will of the majority of themselves to take a place as a subject nation, ruled by an arbitrary and autocratic Council of Nine, in whose decisions eight votes would be cast by foreigners and one vote only by the mighty democracy in which citizenship is our noble heritage.

And we do indeed believe that if mistaken sentimentality should lead us into the fatal error of abandoning our democratic liberties and national sovereignty to embrace this theory of irresponsible, autocratic, foreign rule, it would be only a matter of time until the people would again insist upon their ancient freedom of sovereign self-government, and would make their insistence good, either by WAR against any foreign coercion or REVOLUTION against any domestic coercion.

The blood of our brave and free fathers still runs red in the veins of too many of their sons ever to permit any attempt to subject this republic to the dominion of a foreign oligarchy permanently successful.

The very proposal is abhorrent to all the traditions of our glorious past, is a repudiation of all our doctrines of free self-government, is a shameful aspersion upon the great men whose wisdom and labors and sacrifices and valor laid the foundation and built the walls of our splendid edifice of democracy and self-government.

If the spirits of the mighty dead do, indeed, look down upon this land in which they lived in the flesh, with what amazement and consternation and pity they must behold this attempt to persuade their descendants to surrender the liberties they bequeathed to them and to submit to foreign control the destinies and the fate of this puissant, mighty, glorious, invincible and splendidly free republic!

God keep us from such a wreck of all that is dear and precious to true American hearts.

By K. C. B.

WE HIRED Andy
AND HIS automobile.
AND WENT to Sacramento.
AND I asked Anne.
IF I could take the baby.
TO THE photograph gallery.
AND HAVE its picture taken.
WITH ITS great-uncle.
WHICH IS myself.
AND ANNE said yes.
AND WE went.
AND THE photograph man.
SPENT a lot of time.
IN SHOWING us samples.
AND TELLING us prices.
AND COLLECTING a deposit.
AND WRITING a receipt.
AND AFTER that.
WE ALL hurried in.
TO WHERE the camera was.
BECAUSE THE photograph man.
SEEMED TO have an idea.
WAS A minor incident.
AND BY that time.
HE HAD us all cowed.
AND WE did what he said.
ANNE GAVE me the baby.
AND I stood there.
WHILE THE camera man.
WENT UNDER the blanket.
AND LOOKED through the lens.
AND WHEN he came out.
HE MOVED my head.
TILL MY neck pained me.
AND MADE me stay there.
AND IN the meantime.
SO THE baby would smile.
HE HAD its mother.
STAND BACK of the camera.
AND WAVE her hands.
AND SAY, "Look at the pretty birdie."
AND SOME time.
WHILE THIS was going on.
HE SQUEEZED an atomizer.
AND LEFT the camera.
AND CAME over to me.
AND TOOK hold of my head.
AND TWISTED it again.
AND MOVED the baby's hand.
AND THE baby moved it back.
AND THE camera man.
WENT BACK to the camera.
AND HID under the blanket.
AND CAME out again.
AND SQUEEZED the rubber.
AND THE third time.
HE HAD trouble with my head.
HE COULDN'T make it stay.
WHERE HE tried to put it.
WITHOUT BREAKING my neck.
AND I told him to go ahead.
THAT IT didn't matter.
SO LONG as the baby lived.
AND, ANYWAY.
ABOUT THREE days later.
HE SENT us the proofs.
AND I look.
AS THOUGH I was daring someone.
TO TAKE the baby from me.
AND THE baby itself.
LOOKS AS though it had adenoids.
AND IT hasn't.

I THANK you.

MINUTE MEN

CENTURY PLANT IN BUD

Engineers drilling in a lime quarry in Lee report the deposit sufficient to run a big lime plant for a century.

NON-STOP PEDAGOGUES

Harvard Magazine protests that the University's $1,000 instructors are paid less than union bartenders. But that will be fixed July 1. The bartenders won't have any job. The instructors' job will go merrily on.

NAUTICAL COURSE IN SAVING DAYLIGHT

A bugler at First Naval District headquarters in the Little Building has been ordered to a sea-going detail because he overslept and a substitute bugler had to be called to blow "morning colors."

LITTLE SOFT MUSIC HERE

STEALING KIPLING'S "STUFF"

The Geographic Board, at the request of the Postoffice Department, has added an "if" to California's snappy "Cal" and made the official abbreviation "Calif." The change was ordered to avoid California mail being scrambled with that for Colorado. The postal authorities have put the "if" in California, the same as Kipling put it into poetry.

IN THE INCOME LEAGUE

The federal income tax this year is figured to average $60 per head for every man, woman and child in the country, if assessed evenly. Some bat below that average, other away over it. In this game of batting for taxes no one seems to yearn for glory as a financial slugger. Those who strike out and are exempt make no kick to the umpire.

"LEST HE FORGET"

Our new Victory postage stamps, which are to be issued soon, will be just the thing to stick on any letters to the Kaiser.

Letters to the Editor

Married Women Workers

Editor Boston American:

I wish you would please publish this letter in your paper. Do you or don't you think that the married women ought to give up working in factories now to give the single girls and the boys that are returning a chance to get a job? These married women have a husband to support them. Some have been working ever since they were married. Don't you think now that in laying off help an employer ought to lay off the married women first and give us single girls a chance to earn a good, decent living? Is it any wonder a young girl some times sinks so low when she is turned out of work, and no home but a boarding house to resort to? You know nobody will keep you if you can't pay your board. In the shop where I work are two-thirds married women who have worked in the shop ever since they have married, four and five years, and their husbands making good pay, while we girls who have worked there as long are being laid off.

Please publish this letter that factory owners may read it and in time wake up.

How German Master Spy Worked---

And Failed. His Own Dramatic Story TOLD FOR THE FIRST TIME in Tomorrow's Advertiser and American, as CARL LODY Revealed It to a British Secret Service Agent, the Day Before He Was Shot in the London Tower—"The Germ of Bolshevism Is Spread by the Bite of the Plutocrat," Declares WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. In An Exclusive Article, He tells How REVOLUTION Can Be Made IMPOSSIBLE and Bolshevism Prevented—T. P. O'CONNOR Contributes Another of His Brilliant Discussions of England's Political Problems—EDWARD N. HURLEY, of the U. S. Shipping Board, Tells How We May Regain Our Old Proud Place in the Maritime World—JOHN O'SULLIVAN, the Famous Irish Tenor, Tells of France's Great Debt to Ireland and Why France Should Help Ireland at the Peace Conference—DR. STEPHEN WISE Sees a Jewish Commonwealth Arising Soon "in the Land of Israel"—And Many Other Notable Features!

SLOW THINKING gave Carl Lody to the firing squad in London Tower. This master German spy sailed from America for England on the LUSITANIA, there traveled about freely, mingled with naval officers, disguised and believed to be one of them; worked in one of the most important navy yards in England and at the time of his capture had, British naval authorities declared, "about everything that could possibly interest an enemy regarding our navy." Allan Dodsworth, British Secret Service officer, tells in Lody's own words, how he worked—and how he failed.

"THE PLUTOCRAT SPREADS THE GERM OF REVOLUTION BY HIS BITE," says WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, in a masterly article written exclusively for the Sunday Advertiser and American; "just as surely as the mosquito communicates the yellow fever germ, and the remedy is the same in one case as in the other—SAVE OUR COUNTRY FROM THE MENACE OF BOLSHEVISM and the germ of revolution by destroying the breeding-places of plutocracy! . . . 'The times are out of joint,' and it is important that this, the greatest of republics, shall set an example and point the way to safety. By making evolution easy and natural we can make revolution impossible and indefensible. There is only one way—and that is to let the people have what they want in government. When they can secure at the polls whatever a majority of the people want, there is no excuse for 'mob law,' and with the INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM in operation there will be no last resort among intelligent people."

Marie Lescont did right in killing her child. So a French court decided, and set a precedent for thousands of women and girls made unwilling mothers by the brutality of German invaders. This verdict, without parallel in the world's history, is discussed with feeling and sharp division of opinion by well-known Boston authorities.

The Lloyd George government has SAVED THE COUNTRY from the peril of holding up all England's industries by a miners' strike, by the offer of an immediate LABOR COMMISSION, says T. P. O'CONNOR. England is taking gigantic forward steps these days—"ENORMOUS CONCESSIONS TO POPULAR UNREST," O'Connor calls them.

Those were the good old days, when Yankee clipper ships carried from 60 to 90 per cent. of our own world trade, and the Star Spangled Banner waved triumphantly from ships in every port and every quarter of the sea, the world around. But with the opening of the Civil War, the sun of our maritime supremacy, which had shone since Revolutionary days, dropped into the sea. Now it looks like a new day was dawning for us. ENTER COAL OIL, JOHNNY! He will rub the ships of the future. Now if we back our natural resources with national ingenuity, says EDWARD N. HURLEY, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, WE MAY REGAIN OUR OLD PLACE. It's largely a matter of production and supply—we have the petroleum, we have every facility for turning out the best type of motor ship, we have American genius and energy; it looks like a cinch! But Hurley says if we are to beat competition and hold our own, fifty-fifty—which is a reasonable aim—WE MUST PUT BRAINS INTO THE JOB—BRAINS TO THE UTMOST.

"Gas-Alarm" O'Connor, they called the "Fighting Priest," Chaplain Michael J. O'Connor of the 26th Division. He left off his own mask until sure all the boys had theirs on. Another interesting chapter in the story of the hero chaplain's thrilling experiences in camp and on the firing line—TOLD FOR THE FIRST TIME in the Sunday Advertiser and American.

STEPHEN WISE, the noted Rabbi and Jewish orator, believes that Palestine will not become an independent State at once; but that what the Jewish people hope for and "have every reason to believe will come to pass, is that Great Britain shall receive from the League of Nations a mandate which will confer upon Great Britain the power and responsibility of trusteeship for a Jewish Palestine."
